Peterson Asks Business to Curb Raises

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson today called upon Canadian businessmen to institute a 6.5 per cent limit on increases of wages and salaries.

He said business had to take the lead to keep costs in line in the absence of federal government controls.

Peterson told the convention of Financial Executives Institute at the Empress Hotel:

"The provincial government has been, I think, successful in maintaining a 6.5 per cent limit on increases of wages and salaries paid out of the public purse."

He noted that while restrictions had been imposed in the United States, the federal government in Canda was maintaining a hands-off policy in regards to wage and price increases.

UP TO BUSINESS

"It is up to Canadian business to maintain a limit (to wage increases) if we are to remain competitive and be able to export to the United States."

Peterson's comments came at the end of his welcoming address at the opening session of the conference which has attracted 350 businessmen from Canada and the United States.

He noted that his call for wage restraints went beyond the usual welcome speech but felt it was urgent to make the statement today.

In an interview before the conference began, keynote speaker Frank Capon of Montreal, president of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, said the federal budget reduction in corporation taxes was courageous and a step in the right direction.

"It was less of a political budget and more of a policy budget than could be expected in an election year," Capon said.

He was relieved to see there were no formal restraints on prices or wages as government controls are not long-term solutions.

Business and labor could work out their problems themselves if both sides used restraint.

"It is easy emotionally to say implement wage and price controls. But it is just like putting a cap on the bottle. The pressure builds up."

SMALLER MARKET

A better long-term solution was to let a free market solve its own problems as it would if labor is not too demanding in wage negotiations.

He said if Canadians wanted to maintain an independent nation outside the American orbit we would have to pay the price in terms of lower wages than those in the U.S.

In a market of 20 million it is impossible to reach the level of productivity of the Americans who have a market of 200 million.

Demands for pay parity with the United States could only lead to continental union and loss of the Canadian identity, Capon sid.

Another major speaker at the conference this morning was Kenneth Hall of Vancouver, operations manager of the Trans-Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company.

Discussing costs of the proposed Mackenzie River Valley pipeline, he said:

"No one knows the real cost of laying pipe in the Arctic. Until the first few hundred miles are laid no one will.

"But writers and speakers continue to make economic evaluations and compare alternate routes on a wide variation of cost estimates.

"The present newspaper figure for the 800 mile Alyeska (Alaska) line is $2.5 to $3.5 billion," Hall said.

"A 1,500 mile gas line from Prudhoe Bay to Northern Alberta is quoted at $2 billion. A 2,300 mile gas line from Prudhoe Bay to Southern Manitoba is quoted at $5 billion. Rather wide variations to say the least," he said.

The Dying Art of Talk —Is There a Way Back?

My waste basket has been on time-and-a-half of late, since my name obviously found its way onto a Toronto-based junk mail list, coping with money-back guarantees to make a better man of me.

There's a daily avalanche of literature offering correspondence courses on how to do almost everything. Hardly a day slips by that I don't decline a free, introductory offer to teach me how to breed Chinchillas, how to be a private detective, how to improve what remains of my mind, how to read 10,000 words a minute, how to write for money (a course I desperately need), how to keep bees, hotels, motels and sanity. Just mail the convenient little form and whole new worlds will open.

The offer that intrigues me most, however, is a 12-lesson program from an outfit called The Conversation Clinic with a money-back promise that I may not only enrich my own life, but those of everyone within earshot, presuming they would shut up and pay attention once I've graduated. Conversation, says the brochure, may be used "to manipulate the shuttle that weaves together the threads of fine and worthwhile friendship." I suspect that the line was written by someone who has taken a course in how to write for money.

I don't want to knock this or any other lessons because I hold to the idea that trying to learn anything is better than just sitting around looking out the window, and, besides, this particular offer could hardly be more timely.

Conversation fell upon evil days the moment we dimmed the lights and flicked on the hypnotic eye of a television set. I daresay there are vast numbers of folk who may wonder, from time to time, if they've entirely lost the ability to communicate except to shout back at the tube. (There is a deodorant commercial on now in which a young woman holds up the frock that caused her embarrassment before she found the magic solution and I shout back at that one quite regularly.)

Still, I have certain doubts that conversation is something that may be learned in 12 lessons or even twelve hundred and, even if it could, it might be as dangerous as a course in making bombs. Reading the promises of the Conversation Clinic one can imagine a group of graduates babbling away like magpies or early morning radio announcers. That way, of course, lies madness.

The pamphlet before me merely hints at the clinic's methods, but it does promise to teach the student, in the very first lesson, eight "sure-fire topics of conversation" and how to add interest to "even such themes as talking about the weather," an inducement that won't help sales much in Victoria where hardly anyone talks about anything else.

I keep reflecting moodily on what it would be like to encounter one of the clinic's honor students on a fishing trip. Perhaps nowhere in the world is there a severer test of conversational rapport than in a small boat cut off from escape by deep water. I have been in such circumstances too often with men grimly determined to manipulate the shuttle that weaves together the threads of friendship, men with at least eight sure-fire topics guaranteed to ruin any genuine empathy. Thus I'm all too aware that the world's worst conversationalist is the misguided or insecure gent who thinks that talk must be kept banging over the net or it's no game.

Years ago I took a certain clergyman up to Porlier Pass, a man whose writings I had admired, only to find that he was the sort who keeps leaping, lead-footed, from one weighty subject to another, apparently convinced that conversation is made, not born. Near the end of a long and fishless day I was sure that sheer inertia had stilled him and that we might troll home in blessed silence without any further need for compulsive dialogue. He was silent for perhaps a minute and then, brightly, inquired, "What are your views on cremation?" We never fished again.

The clinic's brochure quotes a resident philosopher to underscore the claim that conversation is the staff of life, to wit: "Long talks before an open fire or discussions under the trees as we walk in the hills may be the deepest joy of life."

No one could quarrel with that, mind you, but it must never be forgotten that conversation, in any setting, is distasteful — "mustard in a child's mouth," as Boswell once noted — if it is anything less than natural and spontaneous. Effortless talk is the second finest communication between two humans. Put it in the mouth of someone who uses it merely to fill a vacuum and it is an intrusion. Men and women have said more to each other before an open fire or on a mountain trail by utter silence.

So I doubt seriously if the clinic's claim may be justified. What might be taught is the art of intelligent listening which is really what we've forfeited in the age of television. The frightening ability to absorb without understanding or contemplation seems sure to be the ultimate curse of the tube. Already we see the conquest of TV over conversation, the viewers capacity for taking in vast quantities of the spoken word without a reciprocating response.

The way back is not in 12 easy lessons, but in a groping, sensitive effort to recapture that art of the face-to-face exchange of ideas. Chinchilla-breeding or hotel management are more easily learned than that.

DUCK'S DILEMMA is how to teach youngsters to swim when workmen have drained the water from the training pool — Harbor Yacht Pond on Dallas Road. From the size of the brood, it appeared the mother ducks had elected one of their members as sitter while the rest took a break until the pond has been cleaned of winter's debris and filled again with fresh water. Saanich To Pick Up Centre?

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Victoria isn't going to take the initiative in efforts to develop a convention centre, Saanich should "step in and show some leadership," Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry said today.

Newberry said the city's reaction to Premier Bennett's recent offer to participate in construction costs seemed to be "to make light of it."

"It was a serious offer and it ought to be considered seriously. But if the city is going to disregard it perhaps Saanich might become involved."

Bennett said last month the province would pay one-third of the costs of construction up to a maximum of $2.5 million if the city puts up one-third of the cost plus the land and private enterprise and "individuals" find the remainder.

At the time, city aldermen said the terms of the offer were unacceptable and Mayor Peter Pollen dismissed it as "politicking" on Bennett's part.

Newberry said today a desirable concept would be one providing not only cultural and convention facilities but also embracing such activities as ice skating — in other words a true multi-use centre.

Other than accommodation, there was no reason why such a centre should necessarily be in the centre of the city. "There are areas in Saanich where it could go."

He noted that there is an increasing tendency in Saanich for community organizations to become involved in providing recreational programs and facilities, and said these groups might be willing to participate in a much larger project such as a civic-convention centre.

If Saanich did take the initiative — and Newberry stressed that he hasn't sounded out fellow-aldermen on the idea — it would expect also "to become involved in any revenue" resulting, he added.

Meanwhile, Victoria Ald. Ove Witt suggested the financing problem might be tackled on an intermunicipal basis, as a convention centre would benefit the entire area.

"The city's share would be the largest, of course, because it would benefit the most," he said.

However, Witt questioned the need for such a "grandiose" scheme as that proposed by the Pacific Centre Foundation, for a combined cultural and convention centre on the site of the old Crystal Gardens. Cost of the project has been estimated at $6 to $7 million.

"I would like to see first a 1,500-seat centre primarily for the purpose of conventions."

Track Meet Chopped

The annual district-wide track and field championships for elementary school students will not be held this year in Greater Victoria.

The decision has been made by the Elementary Schools' Sports Council. Reasons given were a lack of time for preparation and the effects of the school board's cutbacks in the 1972 budget.

The usual zone championships will be held this year, with most taking place at Centennial Stadium, However, the over-all championships, with winners of events from the zone meets competing, will not take place.

Bob Campbell, sports council chairman, said bad weather around Easter kept many schools from getting their track and field facilities ready in time for the championships.

The six zone meets will involve about 36 schools, a district spokesman said, and from 3,000 to 4,000 students.

Five of the meets will be held at Centennial Stadium with the other taking place at Esquimalt high school's new facilities.

Mistrust Linked to Oil Deals

Canada is having difficulty convincing Americans it can be trusted to deliver oil over the long term, federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said in Victoria today.

Security of supply, he said, was one of the most difficult problems in negotiations over pipeline routes through Canada.

"I hope we can have an early and substantive exchange of views to clarify the U.S. position. In my view Canada has and will continue to be a secure supplier of petroleum products to U.S. markets," he said.

"Yet the decision to proceed with the (Alaska) pipeline revealed the U.S. desire expressed by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton to approve the route in part because the U.S. would retain total jurisdiction and exclusive use of the pipeline moving Prudhoe Bay oil southward to markets."

Macdonald, addressing the convention of Financial Executives Institute at the Empress Hotel, said negotiations would continue with the U.S. in an effort to obtain joint use of a Canadian route.

★ ★ ★

He added that Canada was watching with concern the U.S. decision to proceed with the Alaska route.

"We are still far from assured that out coastline will be adequately protected from the hazards of major oil spills resulting from stepped up tanker traffic and our representations for protection will continue."

Macdonald noted that Canada is running a rapidly increasing surplus of exports over imports of oil and natural gas.

Over the long term new policies may have to be devised to reverse this flow as Canada's own needs increase.

"Canada's requirements for oil and natural gas in the year 2000 may well be three or four times the amounts used in 1970."

"Just to meet Canadian requirements, we can expect to need additional reserves approximately equal to all proven reserves to date," Macdonald said.

★ ★ ★

He said it was important that investment capital to finance oil and gas exploration and development be raised to a larger extent in Canada than has been the case up to now.

"We are entering a phase in our development when we can lean more heavily on our own resources.

"This, of course, should not be construed to mean that we no longer need or want foreign help and capital in the development of our economy but rather that Canadians are capable of carrying a bigger load than they have been carrying and that they should have the opportunity of investing in our future growth."

Stores Sought For Development

Negotiations with major store operators are under way for development of a $1 million shopping centre on treed land opposite Saanich municipal hall.

Property manager Richard Talbot said Anglo-Canadain Management Co. Ltd. is planning tentatively to have the centre open in 1973.

A submission is expected to be made to Saanich planning department in two or three weeks.

Buildings would cover some 100,000 square feet, the maximum permissible for the site, and surrounding parking area would be installed with a view to landscaping, retaining as many as possible of the trees remaining from the former residential - greenhouse - undeveloped land.

Talbot said three major stores are envisaged, including a food outlet and a junior department store of some 20,000 square feet each and a large drug store of 10,000 to 20,000 square feet in area.

The remaining space would be divided between about 10 specialty stores, Talbot said.

Former owner of the site is Kelly Douglas and Co. Ltd., which may still be interested in the property for lease purposes following development.

A strong demand for retail accommodation exists in the north Douglas area, where rents at Town and Country shopping centre have risen to $6.25 a square foot.

Talbot said Town and Country has the highest traffic volume per week of any Victoria shopping centre, and the new site lying in the next block north is a prime site with good exposure to traffic moving to Patricia Bay Highway.

The acreage is almost triangular, bounded by Vernon on the east, Douglas on the west and Seymour on the southwest corner. On the south side is a section of CNR right of way, which at that point lies in the bottom of a 30-foot cut.

COURSE IDEAS WANTED

Camosun College's community services division is looking to the public for help in planning its courses for next year.

Ideas for courses are being welcomed for anyone. All the college has to do is find a suitable instructor and try to make the course economically viable.

Community services director Alan Batey said today that "now is the time" for the community to let the planners at Camosun know their feelings about courses, rather than wait for the offerings to be established.

"This is the planning of a full community program and we are anxious that that community have an input," Batey said. He said letters or phone calls should be addressed to him at the college for people who have course suggestions.

Camosun's community services program offers about 500 courses over the year and involves between 12,000 and 13,000 persons.

Nonsuch Welcomed by Throng

Canada's early history came alive today for the thousands who jammed the Causeway and the Victoria coastline to welcome the 53-foot ketch Nonsuch.

An exact copy of the ship, whose 17th-century fur-trading expedition began a commercial empire, the Nonsuch received a reception seldom offered those afloat.

Ships tooted whistles — as did an onshore paint plant, a fire tug led her in, spilling water skywards.

On dock to greet the replica and her crew was a large crowd of notables from Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Premier Bennett to an agog section of Greater Victoria mayors and aldermen.

Members of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps formed an honor guard dockside and the cadet band hustled forth lively music.

Fittingly enough, one of the pieces was Alouette, stirring memories of the French-Canadian traders Pierre Radisson and Sieur des Groseilliers, whose urgings resulted in the commissioning of the Nonsuch's historic journey.

Even royalty attended today's ceremony. Sitting in the Nonsuch's stern as she came alongside was "King Charles II," the king who gave the Hudson's Bay Company its charter after Nonsuch returned to England from Canada.

As she eased into the Inner Harbor under power but with sails listlessly flying, the Nonsuch returned the noisy greetings with a few salutes, fired broadside, of her own.

Many wondered how her namesake's crew must have fared crossing the stormy Atlantic in such a tiny craft.

Today was the day for dignitaries.

From now until May 29 Victoria's citizenry will also be able to admire close-hand the imagination-stirring vessel.

The Nonsuch will be open to the public each day from 7 to 9 p.m. and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

Summer over, the Nonsuch will 'swallow the anchor' and head for Winnipeg where she will be on permanent display at the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

Gov't Rejigs Trade Stand

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday his government has reviewed its trade proposals and is looking at various modifications that might be desirable in future talks with the United States.

"We are prepared to meet with U.S. officials at any time they judge convenient after they have done the same thing," he added.

The prime minister was replying to questions in the Commons.

The trade negotiations came to a halt early this year when former U.S. treasury secretary John Connally rejected the package proposal Canada had put forward.

Indications in official circles here are that neither Canada nor the U.S. is anxious to resume the talks until after elections have been held in each country.

Former NDP leader Tommy Douglas (Nanaimo) reminded the House that President Richard Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau agreed, when Mr. Nixon visited Ottawa, to have their respective government's positions on the trade talks reviewed. Mr. Trudeau said at that time that if it was possible the talks would be resumed.

Mr. Douglas asked what the reason was for the delay in holding the trade discussions. He asked if it was due to reluctance on the part of the American government or was the Canadian government "deliberately withholding any discussions at this time."

Mr. Trudeau said, "We are not deliberately delaying. We have done what we undertook to do."

Students Lauded for Originality

Two offerings that were original in either concept or writing were offered at the second B.C. High Schools Drama Festival session, Thursday.

The first was a compilation of poetry assembled quite imaginatively by the group representing Chilliwack Senior Secondary School.

Included were works by T. S. Eliot, Walt Whitman and John Donne among other great writers but there were also some poems by cast members Penny Reid and John Banman.

In his adjudication, Tom Kerr called the production "theatrically courageous" but felt that it had been hampered by poor diction. Karen Steif had been outstanding however, for clarity of speaking.

From Max Cameron High School at Powell River came an improvisation that had developed into a play. This was a spoof using one of the most famous sentences in history — "Dr. Livingstone, I Presume" — as its inspiration.

It involved the audience through cheer leaders and an auction conducted by Brian Joneson as Stanely, selling a variety of things from jungle diseases to battleships and airplanes.

The adjudicator found it highly entertaining.

A difficult play because of the thiness of the script was the way Kerr described Objective Case presented by Surrey's Queen Elizabeth Senior Secondary.

However he liked the manner in which a dialogue between two store dummies played by Wayne Soroka and Linda Dreger, had been handled.

There will be three more plays tonight at the McPherson.

UVic Censure on Agenda

Administrative problems at the University of Victoria are on the agenda of today's meeting of the Canadian Association of University Teachers in Vancouver, with a decision on censure likely to be made.

The university is currently under censure from the CAUT, following two years of disagreement between the two. The main dispute centred around the handling of three tenure cases by former president Bruce Partridge.

Censure means that the association warns prospective faculty members that it cannot guarantee normal conditions of employment, especially academic feeedom.

Simon Fraser University is in a similar position.

Reports on both universities will be given at the CAUT meetings, which are taking place today and Saturday at the University of B.C.

It is expected that a move will be made to lift censure from UVic, since Partridge, to whom the CAUT's action was aimed last year, has since left the university.

Reports will also be given on two other universities which are now under censure or where it is being considered — Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B. and the University of Ottawa.

Summer Start Set For Low Rent Units

Construction on a low rental Kiwanis Village project in North Saanich will begin this summer if technical details can be cleared.

W. J. Lyle, president of the Kiwanis Village Society said today that arrangements for sewage disposal from the MacDonald's park site must first be completed. Lyle has written North Saanich council to request a connection with the nearby Sidney service.

First phase of the project will probably accommodate 40 people but there is sufficient space on the 4.5 acres to build a complex similar in size to Kiwanis Village in Victoria.

Village suites rent for $45 a month. Married couples also pay their own heating costs, while heat is included in rental costs of bachelor suites.

A villa type lodge which provides meals and meeting lounges for single pensioners who do not wish to cook is also provided in Victoria. Lyle said that this facility requires a minimum of 70 residents and will not be contemplated in North Saanich for some time.

Funds for the low rental project are provided by an annual Kiwanis campaign which about 1,560 people take part to raise $30,000. In addition the society obtains a provincial grant to cover one third of the building cost.

Babysitter Saves Tots

Saanich police are investigating a fire which caused several thousand dollars damage to a Ker Avenue house Thursday night while a babysitter and two small children sat in the living room.

The fire was reported by a passerby at 7:24 p.m., after it had heavily damaged a kitchen, pantry and porch at the rear of the old wooden home.

When Saanich firefighters arrived at 7:27 p.m., flames had burned through the ceiling and attic of the house and smoke damage to the rest of the home was heavy.

Working Drawings

The University of Victoria's planned physical education complex has proceeded to the working drawings stage, administration vice-president Jack Kyle said today.

Architects Rhone and Iredale of Vancouver have been appointed for the project, which is estimated to cost about $2.6 million.

Preliminary drawings have been completed and approved by the board of governors and the working drawings are expected to be completed by October.

Tenders will be called immediately after that and construction is expected to be substantially completed by November of 1973.

Bennett Scoffs at 'Socreds-Slipping' Survey

"That's wonderful," Premier Bennett said this morning of a newly-released survey indicating Social Credit popularity has declined to the point where an election now might result in a minority government.

"At least we're going to be elected again," he quipped.

The survey, in a copyrighted story in the Vancouver Province today, suggested that the official opposition New Democratic Party would only be a handful of seats behind in a post-election legislature — the closest that party has come to power since 1952, when it was within one seat of the Socreds.

"That's pretty good from the Vancouver Province," the premier said. "Remember the last election — every election . . . they're always hinting Social Credit is going to lose."

The premier puts little stock in computer polls. "My people poll shows we will win with a fair majority," he said.

Wait for the election, he warned.

This year?

The Province poll was compiled from computer-analysed voter opinion samples from all areas of the province. Fifty interviews were conducted in each of British Columbia's 55 constituencies.

On that basis, an immediate election would result in the following seat distribution, with the present number held by each party in brackets following:

An important part of the poll was the undecided vote indicated — 24 per cent, which suggests the nature of the campaigns in the next election will be critical to its outcome and that all parties will be concentrating on the undecided votes.

The Province survey indicates that Social Credit, now in its 20th consecutive year of government, is losing strength to the Tories. Curiously, however, it also shows that while the Tories are regaining strength by stealing Socred votes, they may not be able to even hold the two seats they have at present.

Conservative representation in the Legislature at present is not elected, but came as a result of two Socred defections.

The Tory part of the picture in the next election, according to the Province, will be a very small one, however. The only real gainers will be the New Democratic Party. And the Liberals will be holding the balance of power.

The Province says two ridings may be tied — Cariboo and the Kamloops constituency of Rehabilitation Minister P.A. Gaglardi, with the Socreds and NDP matching vote for vote.

The computers have given the poll a certain degree of flexibility. With other factors introduced, it says, the Socred seat total could go as high as 28, a bare majority, with the NDP dropping to 21.

Ottawa Sets 3-Point Plan for B.C. Ships

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The federal transport ministry is launching a three-stage program which ultimately will control marine traffic on the British Columbia coast.

The first phase begins July 1 and covers waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland from Cape Flattery at the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait to Cape Mudge near Campbell River, H. O. Buchanan, the ministry's regional director of marine services, said from Vancouver today.

Ships of 100 tons or more and towboats where vessel and tow extend 100 feet or more are being asked to take part on a voluntary basis initially.

Phase 2, expected to follow in about a year, will make participation compulsory.

The first two phases will be essentially a co-operative marine navigation information service, with ships in the waters covered reporting at each of 14 established locations.

Vessels will radio name, location, course, type of tow and anticipated arrival at the next checkpoint on a VHF radio channel, to be monitored by other marine traffic and the transport ministry from its station at Vancouver airport.

Buchanan said introduction of Phase 2 will depend on availability of receiving and transmitting equipment because vessels in addition to monitoring other traffic will be able to ask a shore station for information.

Phase 3, for which there is no target date, envisages complete radar monitoring and track plotting of shipping along as much of the B.C. coast as proves necessary.

Buchanan is the federal officer responsible for co-or-

CALGARY GIRL BITTEN BY WOLF

Anita Bartlett suffered injuries to the head and upper part of her body and was in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Police who cornered the animal after a 30-minute chase and killed it with a shotgun said they believed it had been partly domesticated.

A department of agriculture veterinarian positively identified the animal as a wolf and neighborhood residents said it had been seen in the southwest part of the city for two weeks.

Tests were being conducted to determine if it was rabid.

N. Viets Decimated At Kontum

SAIGON (CP) — North Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam's central highlands attacked the outer defences of Kontum today, but anti-personnel mines and U.S. bombers and helicopter gunships drove them back in disarray, field reports said.

The 2,000 troops drove to within two miles of the provincial capital, and at times the fighting was hand-to-hand. But it appeared to be a probe or show of strength, rather than an assault to capture the city.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 92 of the attackers killed, many of them by the U.S. F-4 Phantoms and B-52 bombers that supported the defenders.

They said three Saigon troops were killed and seven were wounded, but the casualties were believed to be higher.

Field reports said the advancing troops detonated the anti-personnel mines guarding the perimeter, and the steel fragments thrown out by the mines "decimated" them.

NO SUMMER VOTE—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today there will be no federal election this summer.

At a special lunch-time news conference, the prime minister put down speculation that he intended to dissolve Parliament and call a general election, possibly in July.

Trudeau said Canadians could look forward to "a prosperous, sunny, election-free summer."

Trudeau's announcement to a crowded, jostling corridor press conference ended frantic speculation that had built up over a July 17 election.

And he ruled out an August election at the same time. "There will not be a summer election — but it might be anytime after summer and up to the middle of 1973."

"I hope now you will relax," he told reporters.

A few moments earlier, the prime minister met his party caucus and made the same announcement there.

He told reporters that he has been saying for months that election machinery should be cooled.

Pension Bills Clear Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's two pension bills ended their speedy passage through the Senate today and were to receive royal assent formally making them law — at 12:30 p.m. PDT.

The Conservative opposition allowed rules of the Senate to be waived to permit third and final reading of bills to increase old age pensions and veterans allowances retroactive to January.

The two bills only reached the Senate Thursday afternoon.

Putting the bills into law means that about 805,000 Canadians receiving the basic old-age security pension of $80 a month get an increase of $2.88 monthly retroactive to January, providing a back-pay sum of $17.23 each on top of the normal $80 in June.

Union Chiefs Stay in Jail Until Tuesday

QUEBEC (CP) — Three imprisoned Quebec labor leaders will not be freed before next Tuesday from Orsainville jail here, despite requests for day parole, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said today.

Choquette's statement in the Quebec national assembly may indicate no bargaining on new public service contracts can begin before next week, since unions have demanded the presence of their imprisoned leaders at the bargaining table.

Legal technicalities were being worked out after receipt Thursday by the justice department of requests from the three that they receive day parole to enable them to join the bargaining. They would return to prison at night.

Premier Robert Bourassa said early today, after a two-hour Liberal caucus meeting that ended in the early-morning hours, that dealing with the requests was "essentially a judicial question."

Choquette had said earlier: "Each case will be studied before they are released.

ACT ALLOWS RELEASE

The requests were made under the Probation and Detention Establishments Act, which permits release of prisoners for short periods of time.

A union common front protesting the jailings said Wednesday it was up to the government to assure attendance of the leaders at negotiation sessions.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette and Solicitor-General Roy Fournier confirmed late Thursday that the justice department had recieved requests from Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau for their temporary release.

Drug Cost Cut Ordered in B.C.

New regulations under the Pharmacy Act passed Thursday allow pharmacists in certain cases to dispense cheaper, generic drugs rather than brand-name products.

In a prepared statement Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said in the future a pharmaceutical chemist will be able to dispense a brand other than that indicated by the prescribing doctor as long as the doctor does not stipulate otherwise.

However, if a doctor stipulates "no substitute" on the prescription the pharmacist must dispense the brand name indicated.

Loffmark said that in the past the pharmacists had to dispense whatever drug the doctor suggested but under the new regulations will be able to exercise product selection.

CHEAPER DRUGS

"They're authorizing the pharmacists to substitute a cheaper drug for an expensive one of the same quality," he said.

The minister said that because of extensive advertising some trade name drugs have been selling for $10 to $14 per 100 units whereas the same quality generic drug would sell for only $2.49 per 100 units.

Therefore, he said, the new regulations in such cases will provide a saving of about $10 per prescription.

"It will thoroughly discourage high-cost drugs where the high cost is based on nothing but promotion," Loffmark said.

The new regulations also state that all prescriptions must be labelled with the brand or proper name, strength and quantity of the preparation unless otherwise specified by the doctor.

Loffmark said this regulation will allow the buyer to know exactly what he is paying for.

The statement says that the "actual preparation of prescriptions will be governed by another addition to the regulations."

NEWS BRIEFS

MacDonald Wins

OTTAWA (CP) — Donald MacDonald was re-elected for his third term as president of the Canadian Labor Congress at the CLC Convention today as the old guard of organized labor in Canada stood its ground in overcoming a strong challenge from a Nova Scotia delegate, James Bell.

Pentagon Bombed

WASHINGTON (AP) An explosion shattered a restroom in the Pentagon early today, minutes after an anti-war organization claimed it had bombed the office of the air force secretary. A defence department spokesman said the blast could have been caused by a bomb. There were no injuries. The restroom and adjoining corridor were heavily damaged.

Brandt Challenge

BONN (UPI) — Chancellor Willy Brandt won final parliamentary ratification today of his non-aggression treaties with Russia and Poland and immediately challenged the opposition Christian Democrats to early parliamentary elections. Christian Democratic leader Rainer Barzel countered with a demand that Brandt admit his Social Democrats had bankrupted West Germany's finances and then resign.

LABOR BOSS DIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Hall, 78, once Canada's most powerful labor leader who fought the railways for better working conditions, died at his home here Thursday night.

As chief negotiator for 18 unions of non-operating railway employees, he knit them into a joint force and took on the railways in a bitter 11-day nation-wide strike in 1950.

It was the only strike during his term as head of the bargaining team between 1947 and 1965.

Born in June 21, 1893, in Norfolk, England, Hall joined the union in 1918 as a CPR freight checker earning 37 cents an hour for a 10-hour day, six days a week.

Expelled in 1948 from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress for his opposition to Communist-infiltrated member unions, he came back the next year to lead the ouster of these same unions from the congress.

Later he was unstrumental in bringing the Seafarers International Union into Canada to oust the Communist-led Canadian Seamen's Union from the Great Lakes.

Grits: Little Interest Shown

By
CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

PENTICTON — With its leadership problems aready solved, there seems little chance that the B.C. Liberal convention will do anything this weekend to spark new interest amongst the general public.

Even for those who haven't yet heard that MP David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich) is taking over from Dr. Pat McGeer, the Liberal convention opening tonight has to rank low among political happenings of the year — an event as marginal as the influence of that party's five seats in the B.C. legislature.

The only new development on the eve of the convention was that industrialist Ben Ginter failed to collect enough signatures for a leadership nomination, leaving Anderson opposed only by Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm, who admits to no sizable support.

Even with a provincial election a 75 per cent possibility this year — according to Premier Bennett — the convention shapes up more as an annual meeting than a vehicle for launching a drive to success at the polls.

A voter opinion survey published today by the Vancouver Province reinforces the view that the Liberals aren't about to leap into power. In fact the Province's analysis says the Liberals will lose one seat.

But after several appearances in the last 10 days in ridings throughout the province, Anderson was no more expectant of a Liberal bandwagon developing than he was the day he announced he would seek the leadership.

Chatting privately en route to Penticton Thursday night, the 34-year-old bachelor reiterated the common observation that Liberals hardly seem to exist outside the affluent areas around Vancouver.

Still, the Liberals have little to lose, much to gain, and, as party president Mel Couvelier says, Anderson is the first political leader of the Kennedy

AT LAST! $1,000 BUYS A NEW CAR

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Thursday joined Ford Motor Co. in announcing plans to build and sell a new low-cost car for the growing market in developing nations.

GM said its new all-purpose vehicle will go into production late this month at GM's plant in Tampoi, Malaysia. The car could be placed on the market by the first of July.

Ford, which announced its plans for a low-cost vehicle some time ago, will show its model for the first time in Washington, D.C., later this month, with production to begin later in the year.

Neither GM nor Ford have released price information, but it is believed that the cars will sell for slightly more than $1,000.

The GM version, displayed for newsmen today, has a four-cylinder overhead valve engine, a four-speed synchromesh transmission and a ladder-type frame on which a variety of simple bodies can be mounted.

R. M. Estes, GM vice-president for overseas operations, said the vehicle "will appeal to people in emerging nations who need dependable motor transport at a minimum cost. It is rugged, versatile and economical to operate. It is easily assembled and repaired."

Estes said the all-purpose vehicle has been engineered so that all components except the engine, transmission, suspension, rear axle and steering system can be manufactured in developing countries.

Those components will be produced by Vauxhall Motors Ltd., a GM subsidiary in Great Britain.

. . . LIBERAL CONVENTION

or Trudeau style to arrive in British Columbia.

For the 700 or more delegates mixing together for two days at the Peach Bowl convention centre, this will at least appear to be the start of something new and exciting for their party.

Like the nascent B.C. Progressive Conservatives, the Liberals see their basic political chance as the free-enterprise alternative to Social Credit and the day of Bennett's departure can only be getting closer.

As the Province survey indicates, the main opposition party, the NDP, continues to attract only about 33 per cent of the popular vote, despite what happens to the other parties.

If the free-enterprise vote begins to scatter amongst the Socreds, PCs and Liberals, the NDP could wind up at some point as government.

The Liberal hope is that eventually the majority of free enterprise voters will come home to them.

Policy sessions, executive reports, election of officers and guest speeches make up the bulk of the formal part of the convention Saturday and Sunday — all unlikely to produce any startling developments.

There is an "Arthur Laing night" on Saturday to honor the veteran of provincial and federal politics. Senator Richard Stanbury, the national party president, will speak to the convention Sunday.

And a presentation will be made to McGeer. McGeer's leadership has been controversial within the party. He was never really prepared to be a full-time chief — openly rating his neurological research higher than political life.

McGeer campaigned hard in 1969 but the Liberals dropped from six to five seats in the legislature. It was here in Penticton four years ago that McGeer's ineffective stint as leader began.

The convention itinerary is fleshed out considerably with social items — a close timetable of when the "bar" is or is not open. There are two dances in as many days, and there are more than 1,200 pounds of beef hanging in the kitchens.

The main questions always come back to what kind of leader David Anderson is going to make.

With very thin basic support and an unproven organization across the province, the Liberal Party has to look for a new approach — a dramatic move that will catch fire and make fast and glamorous gains.

David Anderson has an impressive record and reputation as an intelligent and independent backbencher in Ottawa who took on Washington almost single-handed over the Alaska pipeline issue.

He also appears to have a 1970s image. But his remarkably frank and candid approach to his own and his party's abilities in B.C. suggest he knows all about speculating in glamor issues. You can't call it a glamor stock until it starts paying dividends.

TARZAN MEETS CHALLENGE

"Who are you and what are you doing?" he asked them.

"I'm Tarzan," said the young man although he was fully dressed.

"And I am Jane," said the woman.

"Oh yeah, then where's Cheetah?" asked Smith.

The couple then produced their pet chimpanzee, who had been romping on a higher limb.

Unamused, the officer ordered them to climb down and go home, which they did, leading their pet on a leash.

Major marine groups and government have been advised of the program and will be briefed at meetings in Vancouver May 30 and 31, he said.

"It's a start on marine traffic control on the West Coast, as far as I'm concerned."

While it will be new to British Columbia, he said a similar program is in effect on the St. Lawrence River and in Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay, where the Tanker Arrow sank in February of 1970, polluting 125 miles of coastline with oil.

Tankers as large as 250,000 tons are traversing the bay en route to a refinery at Port Hawkesbury, said Buchanan.

The control scheme has been operating five years on the St. Lawrence and three years on Chedabucto Bay. In both cases reporting by marine traffic is now compulsory.

NO BOMB FOUND ON HUGE LINER

LONDON (UPI) — Cunard Lines said today a thorough search of the Queen Elizabeth 2 in mid-Atlantic had revealed no explosives on board, and called the bomb threat against the luxury liner a confidence trick.

A team of four British frogmen parachuted to the vessel to assist in the search Thursday after a man telephoned Cunard's New York office and threatened to explode six bombs he said were aboard the QE2 unless the company paid $350,000.

Cunard board chairman Victor Matthews said he never believed the bombs existed — that the call was a hoax — but that the company could take no chances with the safety of the 1,350 passengers and 900 crewmen aboard the $71 million ship.

Matthews said the caller initially asked for $1 million but reduced it to the lower amount to show he was "reasonable."

He said it was "conceivable" that the money had been paid, but advised against jumping to conclusions.

"The full story will come out later," he said.

. . . QUEBEC

The requests also covered 33 lower ranking union officials who entered prison Wednesday after renouncing their bail pledges, preferring to serve their jail terms in support of the three chieftains.

"Each request will be studied . . . and a report will be submitted within the shortest delay," Choquette said in a statement.

Fernand Daoust, secretary-general of the QFL, said Wednesday the liberation of the three leaders was a condition for the resumption of contract talks between the provincial government and unions representing 210,000 Quebec public service employees.

The talks broke off April 5.

Meanwhile in Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday the Quebec government may want to talk to him about federalism now that its current troubles are on the wane.

He made the statement in a news conference after reiterating remarks in the House that the Liberal government of Robert Bourassa had acted well during the recent Quebec labor trouble.

The prime minster said in the House that Premier Bourassa acted "masterfully and with great stability" during the province's recent troubles.

He was questioned by Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) and reporters about remarks he made in an interview earlier this week which some interpreted to mean that he thought the Quebec government was weak. He said the interpretation was wrong.

Trudeau said he had been asked if the "semi-revolution" continued in Quebec how would that affect his election chances.

shift in popular support. Weighed on the basis of voting population differences between ridings, the survey showed the Socreds to have slipped behind the NDP in voter popularity.

Of the 2,400 people across B.C. surveyed, 1,703 indicated a party preference. That is approximately the turnout in any B.C. election.

The Socreds got 32.08 per cent of the popular poll; the NDP polled 33.34 per cent; the Liberals pulled 21.52 per cent; the Tories drew 12.63 per cent; and all others got 0.43 per cent.

In the 1969 provincial election, the actual breakdown was as follows: Social Credit, 46.79 per cent; NDP, 33.92 per cent; Liberals, 19.03 per cent; others, including the Conservatives, 0.26 per cent.

Of significance to the Tories is the fact no election has yet been called, and they have named less than half a slate of candidates, yet are showing marked progress.

Results of the poll, as well, do not reflect recent changes within the Liberal party. Interviews were concluded before Liberal Leader Pat McGeer announced his intention of stepping down.

Navy Lends Some Color

Arriving in the Inner Harbor, she will be open to the public from 2 to 4 p.m. and be illuminated with lights that evening.

That morning's traditional parade will be led by the Canadian Forces Naden band, followed by regular force units, personnel carriers and other equipment, reserve units and cadet bands.

At noon, members of the 5th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, will fire a 21-gun salute near the Legislative Buildings to mark Queen Elizabeth's official birthday.

On Tuesday, divers from the Fleet Diving School at Colwood will demonstrate four types of diving from their tender which will be berthed at Sealand in the Inner Harbor. The demonstration is scheduled for noon to 1 p.m. and will be open to the public.

Canoe Race

Canoe racing and a barbecue will highlight a May 22 sports day sponsored by Brentwood Bay Shaker Church Indians.

One mile canoe races will begin at 1 p.m. at the Brentwood Bay Indian reserve in Saanich.

The salmon, clam chowder, hot-dog barbecue will begin at 2 p.m. and will last until the food runs out.

Gate fee will be $1.

the weather

A Pacific storm track is now firmly established over the Gulf of Alaska and across the Yukon and extreme northern B.C. This has resulted in an extensive ridge of high pressure to build over the central and southern sections of the province. It will be sunny and warm through the weekend.

Unions, Strikes Urged for MDs

HAMILTON (CP) — Doctors should form unions and be prepared to strike to deal with governments, Dr. G. E. Mosher of Winnipeg, former president of the Manitoba Medical Association, said Thursday.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Medical Clinics, Dr. Mosher said only medical trade unions "with a hard-headed willingness to disrupt society to get their point of view heard, will roll back this obstruction in communication between our political masters and those of us who are called upon to provide health care."

Dr. Mosher also suggested patients be required to pay the first $100 of medical expenses to prevent overuse of health services.

In another address, Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter said he hopes to introduce new health discipline legislation within three weeks.

The new legislation will define the training, licensing and responsibilities of about 20 different groups of health-care personnel.

The minister said membership in the Ontario Denturist Association will not automatically permit a denturist to fit false teeth.

If the province decided to licence para-dental personnel it would establish regulations for their training, qualifications and licensing.

"There have been some reports saying I was going to license denturists," he said. "Potter never said any such thing."

He explained the province had not acted against denturists dealing direct with the public because the Ontario College of Dentistry has the right to prosecute.

However, Dr. Potter said he thought recent raids instigated by the college on denturists were "poorly handled."

G. E. Fetherston, executive director of operations for the Ontario Health Insurance Plan, said 1.5 million persons in Ontario are getting free medical and hospital insurance since the schemes were combined April 1.

About a third of these qualified for free services because of age while another 400,000 had no taxable income.

Dr. J. D. Wallace, general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, told the convention the medical resources of Canada's armed forces are not being put to their best use because of the unrealistic attitudes of civilian doctors.

Dr. Wallace said more use should be made of the armed forces' emergency transportation and evacuation equipment.

But, he said, because of the attitudes of civilian doctors, armed forces doctors in some areas were being prevented from caring for the dependents of military personnel "let alone others in the community who have difficulty obtaining prompt and adequate health care."

WILDLIFE
harold hosford

Among the residents of Happy Valley this spring are several just up from the United States. No, they're not draft-dodgers, army deserters, anti-Vietnam war protesters or cop-outs; they're just plain folks who like what they see on southern Vancouver Island and want to raise their kids here.

One wooded, three-acre plot that backs onto Centre Mountain, has at least three pairs of them as well as a couple from Saskatchewan.

The pair from Saskatchewan, who came this way 30 years ago and never looked back, pay the taxes and ensure that many of the other amenities of life are always available for their cohabitants.

By current building standards, the residences these families (the ones from the south) have put up would fall far short of local building requirements. But what they lack in modern residential conveniences, they more than make up in functional design, simplicity of line and the ingenious use of natural building materials.

SECRET OUT

Before Centre Mountain is buried under an avalanche of building inspectors I'd better drop my little subterfuge. My Happy Valley summer residents are hummingbirds, rufus hummingbirds, which are welcomed each year by Mr. and Mrs. Stan Street, formerly of Nipawin, Saskatchewan. And the structures I speak of are the nests of the hummingbirds; beautifully built of such exotic materials as dandelion seeds, scraps of lichen and spiders' webs.

Like a lot of other people in this part of the world, the Streets have discovered the joys of feeding hummingbirds, but their efforts seem to have reaped greater rewards than most of us have come to expect from this simple summer pastime.

Drop in to the Street's establishment any time of the day and you'll find their hummingbird feeders under attack by half a dozen buzzing, battling mites vying for a drop of the nectar available from four well-stocked feeding bottles.

SUNSET

Drop around about sunset and the numbers have swelled to 14 or 15 Lilliputian battlers. As Stan says "if hummingbirds were as big as pigeons, the country wouldn't be safe for anything."

But numbers aren't the only measure of the Street's success as hummingbird feeders par-excellance. The birds not only come there to feed put they stay to nest. Within a hundred feet of the busy mother shown in my photograph today, there were two others deeply involved in the joys of family life — a dense population of hummingbirds by any standard.

There is no doubt that a bountiful natural supply of nectar-producing plants like apple, currant and arbutus help to attract the hummingbirds but it is the strategically-located feeding bottles constantly filled with a mixture of sugar and water that keeps their numbers so high.

PLUMAGE

Stan says that commercial hamster water-bottles, a mix of two parts water and one part sugar, spiced with a drop or two of red cooking coloring are the secrets of his success. Let's not underestimate the value of keeping those bottles filled. Nothing will turn the birds off quicker than an unreliable food supply. Just forget to fill those bottles a couple of times and the hummers will look elsewhere.

While there is always the possibility of a rare hummingbird such as an Anna's or Allen's showing up from California, Stan Street feels that all of the odd-looking birds he's seen around his feeders could be explained by the natural individual variations in plumage found in any species of bird.

Some of his male rufus hummers show a touch of green on their backs which might lead one to suspect that they were male Allen's hummers. At the same time, a few female rufus hummingbirds show a touch of red on the throat that might suggest they were Anna's hummers. All of which is academic to most folks feeding hummingbirds because the real joy comes from watching the antics of the little fellows. What, or who they are, is less important to most of us.

Of course, we would all welcome such surprises at the hummingbird feeders as the Costa's Hummer from southern California which visited Rob Mackenzie-Grieve in Cadboro Bay a few weeks ago. Or you might even be more startled, as the Streets were this week, by a particularly acrobatic orange-crowned warbler that has become a regular at one of their hummingbird feeders.

HOT PANTS TOO HOT

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Some hot pants are too hot to handle. The U.S. government says so.

U.S. customs agents said Tuesday they had to turn back a shipment of 10,000 pairs of "ladies' disposable paper panties" seeking entry at a Gulf Coast port because they didn't measure up to the flammable Products Act requirements.

A Long Way to Go

The Le Dain Commission's recommendations waffle around in a confusion of permissiveness and nicely calculated penalties. The upshot of the report appears to be that marijuana should be available to persons who want it but that they should be dissuaded from using it. That can hardly be described as progress.

The problem is not an easy one and the commission should not be condemned for not coming up with a perfect solution. We are faced with a widespread desire among the public — perhaps as many as one out of 20 Canadians by the middle of last year — to experiment with marijuana or hashish and in many cases adopt it as a habit. The practical impossibility of abolishing the drug at present is clear, but the prospect of an increasing use, particularly by children, is not one to cheer the nation.

Despite ready assurances of the absence of bad effects, there are still unanswered questions regarding heavy or long-term use. But even without demonstrably harmful results to the mind or the body, a growing resort to drugs as a necessary adjunct to human existence cannot be argued as desirable.

This is particularly true when the use of a relatively mild drug, while it need not necessarily lead to the use of more harmful types, must certainly make further experimentation easier. The usual argument in favor of drugs, of course, is to raise the question of alcohol. But this, in essence, is little more than a comparison of substances neither of which, by and large, has done man much permanent good.

The LeDain report notes that legalization of the possession of marijuana would inevitably imply that society condoned it, with a predictable effect on many persons, particularly the very young. It does not solve this problem. It would impose penalties for trafficking but by widening the loophole of intent make it more difficult to convict a trafficker — another paradox.

Perhaps the most widely acceptable statement in the report is that which says: "The use of cannabis is a problem but so also is the present use of the criminal law to suppress it." There can be little argument about that. The present policy is expensive, difficult to implement, faulty in results, and in many areas almost completely broken down.

The weakness of the Le Dain recommendations is that, although they surmount the problem of enforcing law simply by removing it from the books, they offer nothing which promises to produce any better results. The real answer is yet to come.

Just a Coffee Break?

Canadians should not breathe too audible a sigh of relief over the temporary departure from high office of U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally. Mr. Connally had become known in Ottawa as a hardliner in economic talks between Canada and the United States, and Mr. Trudeau has spoken disparagingly of the former Texas governor.

For one thing, Mr. Nixon has said that the shift in the top Treasury post to George Schultz represents "a changing of the guard but not a changing of the rules." For another, Mr. Connally is perhaps being put into a position more advantageous to Mr. Nixon's re-election hopes and, in any case, into a position where he could come riding back into the scene as Mr. Nixon's vice-president or Secretary of State. He might even be thinking of being a presidential candidate himself — for either party — come 1976.

The man whom the president has described as "the architect of the new economic policy" initiated last August will in all probability not disappear. His influence may not only be enduring, it may become even more potent. In short, Mr. Connally may have become a part of the international reality which Canadians will have to learn to live with.

But Not the Profits, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Bennett's free-swinging reaction to the Le Dain recommendations against drug traffickers seems to have carried the premier a little off balance. He's against all pushers, he says — and will find wide support for that position. Then he lunges awkwardly into elaboration of his generality to include "pushers of advertising of liquor and tobacco . . ."

Incongruous comment, surely, from a man whose job automatically makes him the kingpin in the legalized liquor monopoly in British Columbia, and dispenser of the "take" from the monopoly's operations, presumably rendered more profitable by the advertisers.

Turbulent Air

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has long been a magnet for vigorous assent and dissent. The departure of CBC President George Davidson, with whose name current arguments are identified, comes at a turbulent time. But whatever the cause for his leaving, he is going to continue in a highly responsible job as the Under Secretary-General for Administration and Management at the United Nations. This is the highest U.N. administrative post ever attained by a Canadian.

Mr. Davidson's successor, Mr. Laurent Picard, is used to a rarefied managerial and academic atmosphere. He said recently: "I don't think I'm going to be involved in deciding programs, but I am going to play a role in deciding priorities on programs for the networks." This is a modest way of saying he will influence programming — as he should. And he does not underestimate his difficulties: "We have many more problems than you think we have and a lot of troubles you don't know exist."

He is a man who will have to deal with the aftermath of Jalna, with strikes, separatism in the network and other problems, and throughout this he will be exposed to the capricious buffeting of public opinion. Canadians can only note with satisfaction that Mr. Picard is duly aware of the situation and seems capable of managing a broadcasting empire which (sometimes) helps to knit the country together.

JAMES RESTON

But Stopping Short of War

WASHINGTON — If there is any redeeming quality about this goofy nuclear age, it is that Moscow and Washington seem to know when to hold back when one of them risks a major collision with the other. They both go crazy from time to time, but not together.

When the Soviet Union invaded Hungary and later Czechoslovakia, risking a clash with the United States, Washington aborted the confrontation.

When the British and French used force to achieve their critical objectives in the Suez crisis, Moscow held its fire.

When Khrushchev ran into Kennedy's blockade against placing Soviet missiles in Cuba, the Moscow Politburo turned the missile ships around and fired Nikita.

And now again, when President Nixon, facing the collapse of his whole policy in Vietnam, turned loose the bombers and the mines and challenged Soviet power, Moscow has turned away from the challenge, and re-invited him to the Soviet Union to talk about the more important questions of the world.

Irresponsible Complaint

Well, this is some kind of progress, not much but some. The president and Secretary of Defence Laird and Secretary of State Rogers, all of whom know better, have been complaining that Moscow has been irresponsible and even reckless in supplying far less arms to Hanoi than the United States has to Saigon, and they are now very pleased with themselves that the Moscow summit is apparently to go on, and the White House press secretary, Ron Ziegler, in the exuberance of his 33rd birthday, is proclaiming the success of the president's military and diplomatic policy.

The main point, however, is quite different. Moscow could have accepted the president's military challenge. The Soviets were not blocked by the U.S. mines in Haiphong. They could have flown missiles to Hanoi, as they did to Cairo, that could have attacked the U.S. aircraft carriers whose bombers are now ranging over the battlefields of Hue and Kontum, and attacking the railroads from China to Hanoi, and mining the Haiphong harbor.

But so far, they have restrained their power, as the U.S. has throughout the Vietnam war, and as Washington did when Moscow risked a major war over Hungary and Czechoslovakia. The critical decisions of avoiding world war now rest with Washington and Moscow. They are the most powerful and least experienced of the major states. They have totally different philosophies of life, and conflicting vital national interests in their relations with the two rising industrial powers of Japan and Germany, but they both have as much to lose by major war as anybody else, so at the moment of ultimate crisis they usually tend to draw back.

MELVIN LAIRD

The result of this mutual terror and selfishness between Washington and Moscow is not too bad. The Western Europeans, who dominated world politics in the 18th and 19th centuries, think the new world giants are often clumsy, boorish and reckless, which is true, but at least the new giants have managed to avoid a world war, under their awkward and provocative leadership, for 27 years — seven more than the tragic 1919-39 span between the two World Wars — and while they both jockey for position and fight limited battles against one another all over the world, they don't let pride and conflict over secondary issues provoke them into a major war.

Pleading for Help

Nixon has been asking, almost pleading with, Moscow and Peking to help him out of his troubles in Vietnam, and even offering concessions which amount to a concealed surrender, but they don't help him much and keep on supplying arms to Hanoi. But when he feels trapped and takes reckless risks and challenges them openly, they avoid his challenge, condemn his bombing, and invite him to Moscow.

The men in the Kremlin don't mind if Nixon uses the Moscow summit in his campaign for re-election or pretends that his bombing and mining in North Vietnam have forced Moscow to climb down. They have already given Hanoi enough modern arms to fight the battle for Hue, even against U.S. air and naval power, so they are waiting and talking and letting their officials go to the White House and have their pictures taken with the president.

Let him bomb and mine and bluster all he likes, Moscow seems to be saying, while he withdraws his troops. Moscow is willing to save his face and tolerate his threats, just so he doesn't go too far and keep digging himself into deeper trouble. This is irritating for Moscow but tolerable. It makes Washington look reckless and Moscow patient.

Finger Off the Button

But one thing Moscow will not do in Vietnam any more than Washington did in the crises of Hungary and Czechoslovakia: it will not let the provocations and propaganda loiter down into a test of strength between the nuclear giants. It will let Mr. Nixon do what he can to get out of his mess in Vietnam, but it will not let minor problems provoke it into a major war, and this is at least a little better than in the days when the great powers went to war over the murder of an archduke in the Balkans.

Testing the Triangle

PARIS—Unable to square the Vietnamese circle, President Nixon apparently hopes to triangulate it. Addressing himself particularly to Russia and China, Hanoi's great power backers, he opened wider the doors marked "war" and "peace" and seemed to suggest a choice. Judging by their actions, not their protestations, the Communist behemoths have so far chosen peace.

Nixon offered both an implicit pledge of more generous terms for compromise and an actual demonstration of tough resolve if this pledge is ignored. Should Moscow and Peking accept the embargo imposed on arms shipments or do nothing violent to try and break it, Washington hopes to enlist their tacit support in bringing the conflict to an end.

Just what this could mean is hard to say. Britain urges Russia to join in reconvening the lapsed Geneva Conference on Indochina. Meanwhile the Paris peace talks are suspended — but not dead.

Away from Paris

The diplomatic game around the bloody battlefield is apparently being played in quiet among Washington, Moscow and Peking rather than near the Paris discussions. Only sound and fury emerge from the stalemated conference's periphery.

One is led to suspect that Moscow still plans to welcome President Nixon this month, is calmly continuing the SALT negotiations and wishes to avoid a naval confrontation with the United States. Thus a Kremlin decision appears to have been taken to join in constricting Vietnam's global risks.

One cannot help wondering if a preliminary undertaking to limit these risks was not agreed upon by Brezhnev and Kissinger before Nixon announced his blockade. Secret contacts between Washington and Peking have also been exceptionally active. It is safe to assume that American assurances were given that military activities would be kept adequately far from China and that Chinese concern with Southeast Asia is understood.

The policy of triangulating the interests of the U.S.A., the U.S.S.R. and China involves imagination and risk.

GENERAL GIAP
. . . ratification of chaos

However, Washington claims it is making insistent efforts to limit that risk and describes it as "acceptable."

Zealous aviation and naval commanders over and around North Vietnam must now be cautioned to avoid anything that might enrage either Moscow or Peking. This adds a difficult but not insurmountable responsibility to officers in charge of the air-sea operation designed to slowly induce a more compromising mood in Hanoi.

The immediate problem facing the United States and still threatening its new effort to achieve settlement by diplomatic triangulation is the problem of the battlefield itself. One knows that General Giap, a great captain, is painstaking in prepositioning the supplies his forces require. Therefore it is axiomatic that large stockpiles still exist in and near South Vietnam on which Giap can draw for at least another month.

If during that time, the Communists are able to roll up Saigon's forces at Hue, in the central highlands, or near the capital itself, the entire South Vietnamese political and army structure might crumble before Nixon's new diplomatic effort has even a chance to take effect.

Should Giap produce a climatic victory during the next few weeks he could disintegrate the Saigon state. Then no diplomatic settlement — except ratification of chaos — would be left, either among the three great interested capitals or in Paris or London.

If Giap Fails

On the other hand, if Giap is not able to destroy southern defences with fresh hammer blows, the American naval blockade would be felt and Hanoi would have to reduce its sights. Then, as Nixon hopes, the basis for an acceptable compromise solution could be found and Washington, Moscow and Peking might all in one or another way endorse if not actually guarantee it.

Neither Hanoi nor Saigon would be entirely happy about such an outcome but Washington would be hugely relieved to find itself at last rid of an uncomfortable burden. Peking cannot say as much but obviously welcomes a solution that doesn't give all Indochina to tough and militant Hanoi.

Even Moscow, while seeing its dream of a pro-Soviet Southeast Asian bloc fading, is interested in peace to the west of Russia and a reduction in rearmament expenses. Its primordial problem remains the long-range competition with its only worrisome neighbor, China. Vietnam is only one piece in that puzzle.

'The Judgment Is Spreading'

Testimony to society's growing frustration at the needless damage done by strikes and lockouts has been fortified by events in British Columbia during recent days.

Management, long portrayed as the oppressor determined to starve the workers into submission, is now leading the move toward peaceful settlement of labor disputes.

The Construction Labor Relations Association offers an interesting case in point. It agreed to accept provincial Labor Minister James Chabot's plan to call off the strike-lockout in the construction industry for 30 days while negotiations resume.

If they failed, then a three-man board of arbitration would bring down a binding award on wages. Then other points at issue might be studied by another panel for three months leading up to further negotiations. If they, too, failed, then another arbitration board would deliver the final verdict.

Meanwhile, normal construction would continue. What could be more sensible and reasonable than that?

Well, the unions represented by the B.C.-Yukon Building Trades Council are having none of that. One leader was quoted as describing the plan as "a modified approach to compulsory arbitration which, bluntly stated, is forced labor."

It seems to have gone unrecognized that management was, by the same token, agreeing to terms of forced employment.

Vancouver Sun

It might be said in this case that the contractors were simply saying they would be content to pass along to project owners any scale of higher costs recommended by arbitrators. The fact remains, however, that the owners would still have the option of not building at all, with some contractors suffering from loss of business.

Management's new-found willingness to arbitrate was probably illustrated most dramatically at the recent annual meeting of MacMillan Bloedel Limited's shareholders. "I cannot see the sense of getting into a fight which everyone loses," said J. V. Clyne, chairman.

His proposal, not yet taken up, was that the forest industry and the International Woodworkers of America get together right away to pick an arbitrator to take over if they can't draw up a new contract before the present agreement expires on June 14.

"Why not settle on an arbitrator now, between ourselves, instead of waiting for the government to intervene after a long and fruitless strike?" Mr. Clyne challenged.

It cannot be said that the B.C. forest industry is in a position of dominance, fixing selling prices that its foreign customers shall be forced to pay. World competition is too keen for that. Mr. Clyne, however, still believes that arbitration, no matter what its drawbacks, is better business all around than all-out war between management and labor.

In the words of George Meany, head of the AFL-CIO in the United States, "strikes just don't make sense."

It is unfortunate that the judgment behind that enlightened statement has not yet achieved universal acceptance, but it is spreading. Labor leaders who refuse to see the logic will find themselves increasingly isolated in the modern world.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of May 19, 1912:

The arrival of the most distinguished expert on forest conservation on the North American continent to confer with the provincial government forest service as to the best method of conservation is a matter of importance to the community. In the person of Dr. Gifford Pinchot, president of the National Conservation Association, who arrived on the morning boat today from Seattle, on his way north from California, the city entertains one of the most eminent forestry experts in the world.

The Rift of the U.C. and the Jews

By KENNETH BAGNELL
The Globe and Mail

The discord between the Jewish people and the United Church of Canada is deep, distressing and unnecessary.

Of its depth there can be no doubt. If there was any, it must have ended recently when Emil Fackenheim, the philosopher, was offered an honorary degree by a United Church Theological College. Hundreds of Toronto Jews, survivors of the camps, met and expressed their bewilderment that an institution of the United Church would so honor a Jew.

A congregation at a local synagogue voted on the issue, claiming it would be scandalous of Fackenheim to accept, for it would imply approval of a church whose attitude toward Jewry they have construed as unfriendly.

So it went, in telegrams and phone calls, not from Jewish leaders, but from ordinary Jewish citizens.

Fackenheim was driven to the edge of a dilemma. To accept the degree could be interpreted as a sell-out; to refuse could be interpreted, not just as discourtesy, but intransigence. In the end, he made the proper decision. He will accept the degree and we must all hope it is a step toward the reconciling of the Jewish community and the country's largest Protestant body.

The disharmony has come over the editorial policy of The United Church Observer, which has been for several years deeply sympathetic toward Arab refugees, and highly critical of Israel's conduct in the Middle East. It has been offered, I'm sure, in good faith. But in recent months, it has been extended to severe criticism, not just of Israel's foreign policy, but of Israel's supporters, the Zionists.

FACKENHEIM
. . . reconciliation?

The March issue, for example, contained an article which dismayed the country's best known theologian, Gregory Baum. It claimed, in effect, that Zionists manipulate our newspapers, that they are part of a vast intelligence network penetrating every level of life to advance their cause.

Since the average Canadian assumes most Jews to be Zionists the impression is grim: many Jews are part of an international conspiracy. Moreover, the article draws on Jean-Paul Sartre, claiming he suggests that a degree of anti-Semitism is necessary to give Jews a raison d'etre.

'If there is no actual anti-Semitism," writes the author, "then it must be created." One need not be a survivor of Belsen to sense the effrontery in those words, written so easily by a man who did not lose his parents in the ovens of the recent past.

All this is offered, I'm persuaded, out of the sincere conviction that Zionism, being a political movement, is fair game. But is it necessary that, in its articulation, so many Jews grow so estranged from the whole church simply because of this magazine? I think not. And the fault is partly with the Jews; partly with the United Church.

The Jews must come to see that the Observer editor is given great independence, like it or not, and that when he speaks, he speaks for himself alone. But this is not enough, for the United Church is not faultless, having allowed the rift to grow while it could have at least tried to restrain it.

Its moderator or general secretary could have made in recent weeks or months an unequivocal statement to this effect: "I disagree with The Observer on Zionism for the following reasons . . . ." This would not jeopardize The Observer any more than I am jeopardized when The Globe and Mail publicly criticizes me.

Mystery Ailments Blamed on Chemicals

By PHILIP SYKES

All the doctor did was shoot a trace of ethanol, a substance containing petroleum residues, underneath the tongue of the little girl who'd been behaving strangely at school. Immediately, she wept. She thrashed about in her mother's arms. She babbled like a baby, Her mother appeared to her to be a man.

The doctor's face dissolved into purple spots floating on a yellow background. When he called her by name, her 10-year-old body shook with hysterical sobs. She demanded he use her middle name, which she had never used before.

'Silly Spells'

The attack lasted three hours. She came round and said: 'Doctor, have I had another of those silly spells?" Dr. Marshall Mandell was adding petroleum products to his list of "clues" about the girl. Following up, he established that she became "disoriented" every time she was exposed to car exhaust fumes. Freshly mimeographed paper had the same effect. So did the chemical solvent in felt-tipped pens and the disinfectant in the school lavatory.

After a long series of "provocative tests" like the ethanol injection, Mandell ordered the removal of a number of "allergenic substances" — chemicals her body could not break down — from her diet and her environment. Her physical and mental health began to improve. She was not psychotic.

That girl's experience was not the most bizarre in the casebook of Marshall Mandell. It contains, he says, more than 200 documented histories in which patients with mental symptoms have been helped by the removal of chemicals from their environment after provocative testing. "All the time," he says, "I am turning people's nervous systems on and off with factors from the environment . . . turning them on and off like a tap."

Mandell teaches at New York Medical College. He performs his provocative tests, which expose a patient to small doses of the foods and chemicals to which he might be allergic, at his own practice in Norwalk, Conn. He is one of a few dozen doctors on this continent who call themselves "clinical ecologists."

Short, bespectacled, intense and active, Mandell rattles off his case histories in a voice strained by hundreds of lectures and presentations.

"Unrecognized diseases," he says, "probably constitute 50 to 80 per cent of medical problems. Yet there are many chemical reactions creating illnesses that have never been treated. Doctors don't know what to do with the 'clues' patients give them. When a disease is unrecognized, it's convenient for a doctor to call it 'psychosomatic.' But provocative testing, unlike Freudian psychology, provides a cause-and-effect relationship in many of these cases.

Campaigning for research funds, Mandell tells his story through films and tape recordings of his patients. You see a good-looking adolescent schoolboy reduced to maniacal giggling by a drink of milk and a pretty Jamaican girl plunged into catatonic stupor by a taste of lobster.

Stove Removed

You hear the eerie, wordless throat sounds made by a normally poised housewife in a convulsive fit. She has had, says Mandell, long and expensive mental treatment but her trouble is that she is hypersensitive to natural gas. The trouble went away when the stove was taken out of the kitchen.

Mandell began as a specialist in allergies and his critics in the U.S. medical establishment say he remains just that — an allergist who uses the word ecology to put a fashionable gloss on his research.

To the layman, certainly, Mandell does appear to have a coherent and special view of man's place in the chemical environment.

To grasp it, it helps to think of a man as a moving part of his environment, a vertical projection from soil or street.

He is, after all, earthbound. He is a complex of sensitive cells and these cells react to the earth, air and water in which he moves — his environment.

The human digestive and breathing systems are tubes open to the environment, drawing substances from it and returning substances to it. They are open and they are vulnerable: Man has no armor against his surroundings. The brain is easily reached by chemicals inhaled or ingested from the environment.

If there is a chemical explosion or a gas leak, one substance from the surroundings will transform the human organism as dramatically as acid will turn litmus red. Most of the time, though, in conditions we call "normal," a multitude of substances are at work upon the hospitable human system, changing it in subtle ways.

Since man's use of chemical elements and compounds has multiplied many times in recent decades, it is logical to think that the number of reactions taking place in human cells has also grown. Each of us is, in some measure, what Mandell calls "a walking barometer of pollution."

Chlorinated Water

The house you live in is a sophisticated chemical environment, the city outside your door an infinitely more complex one. A chemical inventory you made of your home would be very long.

You might start the list with the chlorinated water from your tap. It's not good for everyone. Dr. Theron Randolph, a clinical ecologist in Chicago, found that 10 per cent of all his patients had allergic reactions to chlorine in water.

You would have to put down the chemical additives in hundreds of foods and pollution from smoking. You'd include the chemicals in the deodorants, hairsprays, perfumes and cosmetics in your bathroom, the paint on the walls and the polish on the furniture and the wax on the floor, plus the disinfectants and cleaning materials in the kitchen cupboard.

Any one of these can cause an allergy. For many of us, several of them are causing several allergies at any one time.

So the clinical ecologist begins his program of "total control" by cleaning house. The patient stops drinking water from the tap and starts drinking spring water. He stops eating foods that might have been chemically sprayed and goes on an organic diet. The waxes, polishes and disinfectants are taken out of his house.

The patients in the "completely controlled environment" that will be created in Mandell's research centre now under construction in Norwalk will never be "cured." When they are exposed to chemicals they can't break down, they will react.

But they will have themselves under control because they will know what to avoid. And, if Mandell's view of chemically caused illness is correct, they will be luckier than most.

They will be luckier, perhaps, than those who are not definably ill but are, as Mandell puts it, "subject to slight chronic reactions. The person who is constantly tired, depressed or restless and assumes it's overwork or nerves or "nothing serious" may actually be experiencing an allergic reaction to factors in his indoor or outdoor environment."

They will be luckier, for sure, than the thousands who, if Mandell is correct, must be wasting their years in psychiatric wards and mental homes.

AN ECHO OF JACK-BOOTS

CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS
An Editorial

The entry of the John Birch Society into Canada should not be regarded as a curiosity and then dismissed. The organization, as has been proven in the U.S., has great capacity for doing damage.

Its simplistic approach to Communism can be the source of great confusion. When Eisenhower can be deemed a tool of the Communist conspiracy, when the United Nations can be deemed a conspiracy to "denationalize the U.S." and when medicare and mother's allowance can be condemned as evidence of a Communist takeover, we are indeed in a wonderland in which up is down and black is white.

The people who join the Birch society are searching for easy solutions to complex problems. They tend to be paranoic, seeing conspiracies everywhere. They are believers in a "devil" theory of history which holds that evil men, engaged in evil plots, have manipulated the world.

The Birch society has consistently teetered on the brink of anti-Semitism. If their official statements on Jews have been guarded, their membership has frequently been more blunt.

People given to conspiracy theories, seeing enemies everywhere, are prone to believing all of the anti-Semitic myths.

Dr. William Pierce of Washington, D.C., editor of the neo-Nazi periodical Attack, was perfectly correct when he stated in an interview in the Toronto Sun, "People start with the J.B.S. and when they are through theorizing and want some action they have only a short jump to make to the Nazis."

The Western Guard, the former Edmund Burke Society, has also revealed its true colors. That organization's recent references to "Western Christian morality" evoke a clear, jackboot echo.

Changing Rules in Middle

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

One of the nightmare aspects of Vietnam for Americans these days is the sense of deja vu. We have been through it all before: the domino talk, the Presidential heroism, the reliance on American air power to replace a South Vietnamese will to fight.

The old myths are dusted off to provide new reasons for a policy that has not worked over seven years: It is a global Communism we are fighting. The enemy is stubborn, unfair, immoral. Worst of all, he has broken international agreements.

Thus President Nixon has insisted that the Communist's current offensive is "in violation of the understanding that they had reached with President Johnson in 1968, when he stopped the bombing of North Vietnam in return for arrangements which included their pledge not to violate the demilitarized zone." The offensive, the President also says, "is a clear case of naked and unprovoked aggression across an international border."

So many distortions and untruths are wrapped into myths of that kind that it is difficult to sort them out.

The full record of the negotiations that led to the 1968 "understanding" has not been published. There remains disagreement among American experts on whether the North Vietnamese ever accepted the idea of U.S. reconnaissance flights continuing over North Vietnam after the bombing stopped. It is agreed that American negotiators tried to include language recognizing a right to such reconnaissance; the disputed question is whether the other side ever accepted that interpretation.

But, in any case, Richard Nixon as President long ago publicly disavowed the 1968 understanding. Daniel I. Davidson, a member of the peace talks delegation in 1968, has just analyzed the affair for The York Times, concluding that it was Mr. Nixon who "first repudiated and breached the understanding."

To summarize the history briefly, Nixon resumed heavy bombing of North Vietnam in May 1970 at the time he ordered the invasion of Cambodia. He or his aides invented the term "protective reaction" for the raids. At a press conference on Dec. 10, 1970, the President said he wanted to state his own "understanding" about the bombing of North Vietnam:

"If . . . the North Vietnamese by their infiltration threaten our remaining forces, if they thereby develop a capacity and proceed possibly to use that capacity to increase the level of fighting in South Vietnam, then I will order the bombing of military sites in North Vietnam."

In short, Nixon said he would feel free to bomb the North whenever the military situation in the South looked difficult. And he did.

That was tantamount to calling off the 1968 understanding that ended American bombing, whatever its precise scope. To complain now that the present offensive violates that understanding is like one side changing the rules in the middle of a game and then denouncing the other as immoral for violating them.

As for the "clear case" of "aggression across an international border," history makes it anything but clear.

The Geneva Conference of 1954, the last definitive international legal forum on the question, treated Vietnam as one country. It recognized a "military demarcation line" but agreed that this was "provisional and should not in any way be interpreted as constituting a political or territorial boundary." The line was to last only until a national election in 1956.

As President Eisenhower frankly said, the United States decided to block the election — because the Communists would have won it — and to build up an anti-Communist government in the South. It was the United States that divided Vietnam, not the Vietnamese or the French.

Of course two very different societies have developed in the two Vietnams since 1954. There are real fears of Communism in the South, and antipathy to the Northerners. The North conceives of itself as fighting a civil war.

The irony is that a few years ago we could have made a settlement with the Communists that gave hope for an autonomous South Vietnam. The Vietcong leaders had real regional feelings and, most experts feel, would not have been mere agents of the North. But endless years of war have given the North a dominant role.

The one thing that is clear from the anguish of the last decade is that the United States is an alien element in Vietnam. All the blood and treasure we have spent have not given the South Vietnamese, with a 500,000-man army that is by far the best equipped in Southeast Asia, the will to resist on their own a North Vietnamese force that we estimate at about 110,000. And so we go on with a policy of mass destruction, clouded by myths.

Divided Empire In the North

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Government in Canada has never assumed a more awesome responsibility than the wise management of the present northern boom. Development, which can enrich the nation, must not destroy the peoples who live in the north or the natural system they live by. As Jean Chretien, the minister responsible for both northern development and Indian affairs, has said: "The needs of the people in the North are more important than resource development and the maintenance of the ecological balance is essential." Those are civilized words. They are more civilized than the record so far of the Trudeau government and of Mr. Chretien's ministry:

Arctic law: Two years ago Parliament declared Canada's sovereignty over the Arctic passages by passing a law to control pollution. That law has not been proclaimed. Ottawa excuses itself on the grounds that the voyage of the U.S. supertanker Manhattan was not followed by regular traffic. Must someone be run down before we enact safe driving laws?

CHRETIEN
. . . can't serve both

James Bay: Ottawa joined Quebec in a "quickie" study of the environmental effects of this hydro-electric project which could change the course of five big rivers, flood 5,000 square miles, change the ecology of one quarter of the territory of Quebec and destroy a hunting, fishing and trapping economy sustaining 6,000 Indians and Eskimos.

The environmental task force was assigned last July, authorized in August, reported in December. For three days in September four members flew over the southern part of the project site. The rest was theory. Apologetic as it was, the task force conceded the impact on Indians was "potentially alarming." The project is bulldozing on.

Wildlife: What will seismic blasting and oil drilling do to Arctic animals and the plants they feed on? We don't know. To find out, Ottawa's own Canadian Wildlife Service proposed three things: A map survey to pinpoint critical wildlife areas; a scientific team working across the North to draw up the necessary constraints on resource developers; a five-to-10 year study to detail damage to the fragile Arctic ecology.

The maps were done. There weren't adequate funds for the scientific survey. Only one scientist went into the field. The long-range program never started. In 1970 one of the wildlife service's directors complained of "our appalling ignorance of Arctic ecology." It is only slightly less appalling now.

Mackenzie Valley: The wildlife service has put 18 men into the Mackenzie Valley, site of a proposed oil pipeline from the Arctic to the U.S. Midwest. They have not yet reported on the environmental consequences. Ottawa is not waiting anyway. In its understandable anxiety to steer U.S. oil companies away from a potentially disastrous tanker route down the B.C. coast, Ottawa takes the Mackenzie's superiority as read.

Yet scientists have warned that the Mackenzie's banks can be crumbled into the river. A senior wildlife service man has said that "one pipeline break could cover the Mackenzie Delta with a layer of black crude oil that could never be removed."

These fumbles are only a fragment of the record. In a background statement on the Arctic, Pollution Probe lists more. Their references to Mr. Chretien's department often show one of its concerns, development, overwhelming the other, native peoples and their environment. Mr. Chretien's concern for people has generated less apparent urgency than the imperatives of oil and gas development.

The interests of oil companies and Canadian Indians are interests in conflict. With responsibility for guiding development as well as Indians and their environment, Mr. Chretien runs a schizophrenic empire. If there is to be justice in the north, the empire must be broken up.

The Mercedes-Benz 280SE.

A different definition of comfort

Most expensive cars are designed to remove the feel of the road from the driver. The Mercedes-Benz 280SE defines comfort in a different way.

It gives you the comfort that comes with control. Control that eases tensions that build during a long drive. The fully independent suspension holds the road without wallowing or wandering. But road-holding alone isn't enough to satisfy our concept of comfort.

The orthopedically contoured seats are designed for extended stays. Seat springs are tuned to virtually eliminate those tiny vibrations that can contribute to fatigue. And, of course, the steering column has its own shock absorber.

You can only really appreciate this satisfying concept of comfort during a long test drive. We invite you to take one. And when you do, we believe you'll want to make this the year you will finally own a Mercedes-Benz.

Gov't Rejigs Trade Stand

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday his government has reviewed its trade proposals and is looking at various modifications that might be desirable in future talks with the United States.

"We are prepared to meet with U.S. officials at any time they judge convenient after they have done the same thing," he added.

The prime minister was replying to questions in the Commons.

The trade negotiations came to a halt early this year when former U.S. treasury secretary John Connally rejected the package proposal Canada had put forward.

Indications in official circles here are that neither Canada nor the U.S. is anxious to resume the talks until after elections have been held in each country.

Former NDP leader Tommy Douglas (Nanaimo) reminded the House that President Richard Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau agreed, when Mr. Nixon visited Ottawa, to have their respective government's positions on the trade talks reviewed. Mr. Trudeau said at that time that if it was possible the talks would be resumed.

Mr. Douglas asked what the reason was for the delay in holding the trade discussions. He asked if it was due to reluctance on the part of the American government or was the Canadian government "deliberately withholding any discussions at this time."

Mr. Trudeau said, "We are not deliberately delaying. We have done what we undertook to do."

Students Lauded for Originality

Two offerings that were original in either concept or writing were offered at the second B.C. High Schools Drama Festival session, Thursday.

The first was a compilation of poetry assembled quite imaginatively by the group representing Chilliwack Senior Secondary School.

Included were works by T. S. Eliot, Walt Whitman and John Donne among other great writers but there were also some poems by cast members Penny Reid and John Banman.

In his adjudication, Tom Kerr called the production "theatrically courageous" but felt that it had been hampered by poor diction. Karen Steif had been outstanding however, for clarity of speaking.

From Max Cameron High School at Powell River came an improvisation that had developed into a play. This was a spoof using one of the most famous sentences in history — "Dr. Livingstone, I Presume" — as its inspiration.

It involved the audience through cheer leaders and an auction conducted by Brian Joneson as Stanely, selling a variety of things from jungle diseases to battleships and airplanes.

The adjudicator found it highly entertaining.

A difficult play because of the thiness of the script was the way Kerr described Objective Case presented by Surrey's Queen Elizabeth Senior Secondary.

However he liked the manner in which a dialogue between two store dummies played by Wayne Soroka and Linda Dreger, had been handled.

There will be three more plays tonight at the McPherson.

UVic Censure on Agenda

Administrative problems at the University of Victoria are on the agenda of today's meeting of the Canadian Association of University Teachers in Vancouver, with a decision on censure likely to be made.

The university is currently under censure from the CAUT, following two years of disagreement between the two. The main dispute centred around the handling of three tenure cases by former president Bruce Partridge.

Censure means that the association warns prospective faculty members that it cannot guarantee normal conditions of employment, especially academic feeedom.

Simon Fraser University is in a similar position.

Reports on both universities will be given at the CAUT meetings, which are taking place today and Saturday at the University of B.C.

It is expected that a move will be made to lift censure from UVic, since Partridge, to whom the CAUT's action was aimed last year, has since left the university.

Reports will also be given on two other universities which are now under censure or where it is being considered — Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B. and the University of Ottawa.

Summer Start Set For Low Rent Units

Construction on a low rental Kiwanis Village project in North Saanich will begin this summer if technical details can be cleared.

W. J. Lyle, president of the Kiwanis Village Society said today that arrangements for sewage disposal from the MacDonald's park site must first be completed. Lyle has written North Saanich council to request a connection with the nearby Sidney service.

First phase of the project will probably accommodate 40 people but there is sufficient space on the 4.5 acres to build a complex similar in size to Kiwanis Village in Victoria.

Village suites rent for $45 a month. Married couples also pay their own heating costs, while heat is included in rental costs of bachelor suites.

A villa type lodge which provides meals and meeting lounges for single pensioners who do not wish to cook is also provided in Victoria. Lyle said that this facility requires a minimum of 70 residents and will not be contemplated in North Saanich for some time.

Funds for the low rental project are provided by an annual Kiwanis campaign which about 1,560 people take part to raise $30,000. In addition the society obtains a provincial grant to cover one third of the building cost.

Babysitter Saves Tots

Saanich police are investigating a fire which caused several thousand dollars damage to a Ker Avenue house Thursday night while a babysitter and two small children sat in the living room.

The fire was reported by a passerby at 7:24 p.m., after it had heavily damaged a kitchen, pantry and porch at the rear of the old wooden home.

When Saanich firefighters arrived at 7:27 p.m., flames had burned through the ceiling and attic of the house and smoke damage to the rest of the home was heavy.

Working Drawings

The University of Victoria's planned physical education complex has proceeded to the working drawings stage, administration vice-president Jack Kyle said today.

Architects Rhone and Iredale of Vancouver have been appointed for the project, which is estimated to cost about $2.6 million.

Preliminary drawings have been completed and approved by the board of governors and the working drawings are expected to be completed by October.

Tenders will be called immediately after that and construction is expected to be substantially completed by November of 1973.

Mini-Skirted, Hot-Panted Den Mothers!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Say goodbye to the old boy scouts.

Come September they'll be known only as scouts and many will be sporting bright red berets.

Cub scout den mothers also will get a new look that includes miniskirts and hot pants as official uniforms.

The scouts, in convention here, are not only modernizing the uniform, but initiating major changes that will give scouts a new image and more leadership responsibility that is intended to better prepare them for urban life.

The traditional boy scout handbook is being rewritten to reflect contemporary life and problems. Scouts in the inner city will be taught how to treat rat bites as well as snake bites and how to negotiate a subway system as well as a mountain trail.

"If scouting is to make the kind of contribution to this country over the next decade that it has for the past 60 years, it must be sensitive to the real needs of our youth everywhere," said Alden G. Barber, national chief scouting executive.

More than 4,000 scout executives are here for the week-long 62nd annual convention.

The word "boy" is being dropped because a two-year study found that youths were being turned off by it, a scout official said. The organization, however, will retain the name Boy Scouts of America.

The study also found that scouts wanted a more modern uniform, more decision-making responsibility and a more flexible system of advancement.

CLEAN-UP LETTER MISCONSTRUED

A Victoria alderman who has launched a letter-writing campaign aimed at cleaning up the downtown area says some property owners have misconstrued the intent of the drive.

Ald. Ove Witt, chairman of the parks committee, says this is apparent in the first few replies to the 500 letters he mailed to downtown businessmen this week.

One reply complained: "I wish you people in city hall (that we put there) would send these letters to the people concerned instead of wasting the taxpayers' money."

Witt stressed that the only purpose of the letter was to remind property owners that they are responsible under a city bylaw for keeping sidewalks in front of their property clean.

"I've had many complaints about sidewalks being in a filthy state," he said.

Victoria Launches Beavers

A new Boy Scout program, to attract boys from six to eight years of age — will be introduced in Victoria in September.

Called Beavers-Canada, 5th Douglas group, at Garden City United Church, will introduce the program in the Greater Victoria area on a three-year trial basis.

Initiated last fall in Winnipeg, Beavers-Canada is expected to fill a gap for boys who are too young to join the Cub Scouts.

The Beavering program will stress sharing and not competition as is done in the cub and scout programs.

The program will be initiated by 15 other scout councils across the country and national officials believe more than 100,000 boys will be attracted to the program.

Currently there are 275,000 boys and 33,000 adult helpers in the Canadian scout movement.

LAVISH RE-OPENING

FREDERICTON (CP) — The Playhouse re-opened here Tuesday night with the most lavish live theatre productions ever staged in New Brunswick.

The playhouse closed last fall for renovations costing $1.5 million. The main change is the 69-foot fly gallery which permits instant changes of scenery.

The Playhouse was a gift to the province in 1964 by Lord Beaverbrook and the Sir James Dunn foundation.

250 Enrol At Camosun

Enrolment at Camosun College's first-ever spring term is put at about 250, college officials have announced.

The term covers eight weeks through May and June and will be followed by a summer term in July and August.

Fallers' Decision Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Harry McKay of B.C. Supreme Court Thursday reserved decision on the fourth of a series of contempt of court actions brought by major B.C. timber companies against forest industry fallers.

Thursday's action was brought by Crown Zellerback (Canada) Ltd. against eight fallers at its Courtenay operation. The company alleges the fallers have ignored an April 26 B.C. Supreme Court injunction which ordered them to end an unlawful concerted strike.

More contempt cases are pending.

The court applications, first for injunctions and then for contempt of court for alleged violation of the injunctions, came after fallers at several coastal timber operations began walking off the job April 20 and have yet to return.

The walkout by fallers, all International Woodworkers of America members, came after they demanded the timber companies and the union accelerate negotiations aimed at a new pricing formula for fallers.

The injunction did not order the men as individuals simply to return to work. It ordered them to stop taking part in a group refusal to work when the purpose of the refusal was to illegally pressure the company.

Lawyer Peter Butler, counsel for Crown Zellerbach, told Mr. Justic McKay the fallers should have challenged the injunction in court, rather than choosing to ignore it and continue their strike.

Butler contended that the eight fallers not only stayed away, but that they also acted in concert to further their demands. He said that "it would tax the ingenuity" to say the men did not act in concert.

European. Tough. And beautiful.

Here's the little economy import that's become such a success in Canada. With a sales increase this year of 62% over the same period a year ago.*

Why? Because we built it strong to take on any driving condition. From our hot Canadian summers, to our cold winters. Over all kinds of roads.

And that's the kind of car Canadian drivers wanted.

A tough little car with rack and pinion steering for precise control around corners and through bumper to bumper city traffic. With a 2-litre Overhead Camshaft engine, that's strong and dependable. Coupled to a silk-smooth 4-speed transmission, for swift positive acceleration. With power front disc brakes to let Cortina stop straight and fast—time after time. And it's all standard.

Inside, Cortina's roomy enough for 5 adults to travel in comfort. With a long list of standard features: loop-pile carpeting, electric rear window defroster, heavy duty heater, front and rear grab handles, armrests, cigarette lighter and fully reclining front bucket seats.

If you want more there's an optional automatic transmission and a dealer installed radio. But that's it. We made Cortina complete.

Whether you choose the Cortina 2-door or 4-door sedans, the sporty 2-door GT or the new Cortina 4-door Estate Wagon, you'll find Cortina is fun to drive—beautifully styled—and built to last. It's tough to beat.

Warnock

Warnock International Ltd. and its subsidiaries report a net profit of $80,000, two cents a share, for 1972, against a loss of $112,000, eight cents a share, in 1971.

Gross revenue was $9,446,000 against $13,493,000 last year.

Decline in revenue was due to disposal in late 1971 of certain operations and that the disposals accounted for much of the improved operating results.

Brenda

Brenda Mines Ltd. reports a net loss of $585,000 or 13.7 cents per share for the first quarter of 1972, compared o earnings of $556,000 or 13 cents per share for the same period last year.

Revenue was $6,485,000 for the first three months of this year, down from $7,454,000 in the first quarter of 1971.

CanPac

The Ardley coal field, 25 miles east of Red Deer, has been the subject of discussion by Calu Stud Red Deer and Edmonton officials as a possible site for a thermal-electric power plant to supply the three cities.

The field was formerly owned 40 per cent by CanPac, the mining arm of the CPR and 60 per cent by Dynamic. With the purchase of Dynamic, CanPac now controls all the coal field.

Atlas

Atlas Explorations Ltd., of Vancouver, has reported a loss of $397,510 for the year ended Dec. 31, compared to a loss of $2,957,855 in 1970. On a per share basis, the loss dropped from 60 cents to eight cents.

The 1970 figures include extraordinary loss items totalling $1,996,565, against $153,702 last year.

The largest extraordinary item in 1970 was a $1,300,000 provision for non-recovery of gas exploration costs.

C. Reserve Oil

Canadian Reserve Oil and Gas Ltd. earned $510,000 or 5.4 cents a share during the first three months this year.

In the same period of 1971 net income was $366,000 or 3.9 cents a share.

Cornat

Cornat Industries Ltd. reports income for the first three months of 1972 of $41,771, down from $47,084 for the same period in 1971.

Operational costs for the company, which is engaged in trucking, food processing, real estate and ice and cold storage, were higher than normal and accounted for most of the drop in income.

City Area on Verge Of Real Estate Boom

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Victoria is on the verge of another real estate boom as demand for houses overtakes the supply.

The Victoria Real Estate Board reports 37 sales in the past five days have been chalked up by the Multiple Listing Service and at the present rate the total could go over 200 for the month of May.

This compares with 179 last May.

Board manager John Hicks comments:

"There has been no appreciable increase in house prices during the past 12 months but prices may rise with this increased demand and rising interest rates."

The board, which co-ordinates the Multiple Listing Service for Victoria realtors, expects real estate sales in the area will top last year's total of $50 million.

The peak selling months are just beginning. Sales, which usually slip to 110 a month in November and December, rise in spring to reach a peak in August, just before school opening.

Last year there were 179 sales in May, 209 in June, 220 in July and 234 in August.

All these totals may be topped this year if the brisk pace of early May continues into the summer.

Board president Eric Charman reports there is a heavy demand for moderately-priced homes.

"Any house in the $20,000 to $30,000 range, if it is properly and intelligently priced, is selling very quickly."

Homes in the $50,000 to $80,000 range are moving slower at the moment but above the $100,000 level there have been a high percentage of quick sales, he reports.

The Multiple Listing Service, which is available to all real estate firms who are members of the board, reports that, on average, 15 per cent of new listings are sold within the first seven days on the market.

Of sales made by MLS, 55 per cent are completed within the first 28 days of listing.

Charman notes that while record sales are possible this year, salesmen will have to keep working to top last year's output which was a banner season, 28 per cent above the year before.

In other real estate news:

—The board has decided to start a real estate exchange club starting May 24. Salesmen who join the club will meet regularly to discuss possible trades to move property quicker than through the straight sales method.

—Board manager Hicks has been elected president of the Northwest Council of Multiples for Idaho, Washington, Oregon and British Columbia.

—More than 60 local salesmen attended the provincial real estate conference in Penticton in the past week.

—About 100 realtors from Portland will be in Victoria for three days in July to attend a conference with local salesmen for an exchange of ideas.

—Victoria has been selected as the site for next year's provincial realtors convention in May and more than 600 delegates are expected to attend.

Environment Course Eyed

A proposed course on the environment won't be approved by the University of Victoria senate until the course is more clearly defined, senators decided Thursday.

A senate committee was asked to study the proposal, made by three UVic professors — Marcus Bell and Robert Reid of the biology department and W. R. D. Sewell of the economics and geography department — who asked the senate to approve the idea in principle.

Dr. J. P. Vinay, about to become dean of arts and science, said he thought the senate was "putting the cart before the horse" if it approved a course it knew little about.

Graduate student senator David Dunsmuir replied: "There have been so many carts around here that have just crumbled to dust while we have been waiting for a horse." Dunsmuir said people who make such course proposals need all the encouragement they can get.

A similar proposal regarding a program of liberal studies was also referred to a senate committee for study and will be discussed in more detail at a later date.

In another matter, the senate decided to refer to the faculties of arts and science and fine arts a proposal that the department of history in art be switched from the fine arts faculty to the arts and science faculty.

Art history department head Alan Gowans said the switch is being requested because the department is more historical in the way it teaches art history than it is interpretative.

The proposal was supported by both Vinay and by present arts and science dean John Climenhaga, who said both faculties should be given the opportunity to discuss the proposed move before senate decides on it.

A special senate meeting has been set for May 31, at which the reactions of the two faculties to the proposal will be discussed and a decision made on the matter.

In one other item of business, senate was informed that of the 572 courses offered in 1971-72 in the faculty of arts and science, 219 were attended by 10 or fewer students. The subject was brought up by Maurice Johnson, who proposed elimination of such courses if they are no longer popular with students. There will be a further university-wide report on the number of such courses.

HANDICRAFTS SHOWN

Exhibits include examples of hand-spun mohair and linen hangings, pottery, stitchery, rock painting and hand-made rugs.

Sponsored by the community Art Council in conjunction with the Victoria Days Festival, the show is credit to council president Allan Purdy, Mrs. Burton Kurth, vice-president, Anne Adamson and others who organized and planned the 18-day show.

The council's other contribution to the festival is a costume ball to be held in the dining room of Craigdarrock College, University of Victoria, Saturday, starting at 9 p.m. The ball is opened to anyone. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Some of the works to watch for at the show are the glass exhibits of Mel Munsen, 551 Latoria Road, who placed first in the Victoria Crafts Showcase; the raku pottery of Michael Richardson, 4416 Wilkinson Road, and a natural wool poncho by Frances Hunter, 8428 Lawrence Road. The last two won awards.

There is also some fine ceremic pieces by Dick Hansen, 633 Courtney, who came to Victoria from England two years ago, and is now teaching his skills to Victorians.

Apart from the exhibition, demonstrations of crafts are being given every day from 1 to 4 p.m. Today and Saturday, members of the Weaver's Guild will demonstrate the art of weaving.

Next week, starting Tuesday, the New Embroiders' Guild will demonstrate its craft.

Showcase will also provide some entertainment for visitors over the weekend. On Sunday, the Conservatory of Music will present a concert of chamber music and the Bastion Studio Theatre will provide some light entertainment.

Showcase will end on May 26. There is no admission charge.

Theft-Deterrent Bike Tags Too Costly, City Decides

Bicycle licensing could act as a deterrent to thieves and help police to identify lost or stolen bicycles, Victoria aldermen agreed Thursday.

But city council's legislative committee endorsed the view of city manager Bill Hooson that annual licensing would involve excessively high administrative costs.

Hooson suggested an initial registration fee, with the licence remaining in force until the machine was either sold or destroyed. To defray administrative expenses, he said, this might have to be set at about $5.

However several aldermen felt that was too high. A $5 licence was "outrageous," said Ald. Ove Witt.

The committee recommended that the matter be referred to the Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee for study.

Hooson told aldermen the increasing popularity of bicycles for all age groups leads to more thefts, and fewer than half the bicycles reported lost or stolen in the city are recovered.

The total number of bicycles in the Greater Victoria area is estimated at 20,000, he said.

Plumbers' Lockout Ruled Legal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Harry MacKay of the British Columbia Supreme Court dismissed Thursday an application by the plumbers' union to have a lockout by the Construction Labor Relations Association declared illegal.

The union had claimed that the lockout affecting 96 plumbing contractors should be called off. It contended that a lockout vote by the companies involved was not valid under the terms of the provincial Mediation Commission Act.

The Supreme Court judge, in dismissing the application, ruled that the lockout vote was legal.

Medical Bill 'Reduced'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Derril Warren, provincial Conservative Party leader, told a meeting of the Vancouver Medical Association Thursday that their fees are not swallowing up provincial government revenues.

He said that after studying federal cost-sharing and other financial aspects, he determined the province actually paid $390,515 less in 1971 for medical services under the control of the Medical Services Commission than it did the year before.

He said the provincial government's share of medical costs for the year ending March 31, 1971 was $7 million, less than one-half of one per cent of the provincial budget.

Labor's Image Worries NDP

By DUDLEY MAGNUS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Gallup polls on public opinion of the labor movement are causing federal New Democratic Party leader David Lewis grave concern, delegates at the ninth convention of the Canadian Labor Congress were told Thursday. Lewis was guest speaker.

"Indeed, I have been shocked by results in Gallup polls on this general subject," he said to more than 1,600 delegates at the Ottawa Civic Centre. "It is important to note one such poll, in particular, published last October — people were asked whether they believed big unions or big corporations or both had too much economic power."

Lewis had said earlier that it was a "widespread belief" that labor was too strong, that it was "selfish in its demands" and that labor didn't give enough attention to "the interests of society as a whole."

He disagreed that unions were like this as a whole, yet, he said, "even in trade union families" this belief had been held in the poll showing.

The veteran labor lawyer who has taken part in countless wage disputes as union counsel, said the result of the poll shows 13 per cent believed big unions had too much power, 4 per cent believed that big corporations had too much power, and 55 per cent felt both groups had too much power.

"What I found most disturbing," he said, "was that the Gallup breakdown showed the labor category of answers gave similar results."

EXTRAVAGANT DEMANDS

Lewis, who attributed some of the blame to labor for "extravagant" initial demands that obviously couldn't be reached in the end wage agreement, said the Gallup breakdown showed that 12 per cent of labor people believed that only big unions had too much power, while 47 per cent said both big unions and big corporations had too much power.

"But only 5 per cent of the labor category believed that big corporations alone had too much economic power. In short, the assault by corporations and the news media is making headway. The public mind has been seriously affected by the barrage against trade unions," Lewis said.

He said, "in this environment, anti-labor laws and anti-labor acts are fashionable. And . . . those of us who believe in trade unionism must try to understand that causes of the environment in order that we may successfully adapt our politics and actions to the needs and aspirations of all working Canadians."

CHALLENGE

One reason for the present environment, he said, was that unions now represent a challenge to corporate power.

"The issue is often seen as the right of the employer to carry on his affairs as he sees fit without any interference from the rabble on the shop floor or from the union which represents it."

Furthermore, trade unionism is an effective means of redistributing income in society, he said, and of giving more to the worker, and corporations cannot ignore the human factor in production when a union represents the employees.

"We must frankly ask ourselves whether all unions have been sufficiently conscious of their obligations not only to their own members but to the majority of workers who are not organized, and to society generally."

He said unionism should ask "whether part of the explanation may not be within itself; whether the labor movement . . . has succeeded in adapting . . . to the modern age."

Lewis let the news media slightly off the hook by telling delegates in effect not to brush off everything as coming from anti-labor media. "It is this challenge to corporate power, this conflict between the human interests of the worker and the privileged interests of the corporation that the establishment resents.

SMOKING ON THE JOB may be criticized as a fire hazard in some occupations, but this fireman obviously figures he has the situation under control as he puffs on a cigarette while playing the hose over a burning garage near Prince George. Liberal Defeat New CLC Goal

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress representing 1.7 million members voted Thursday to work for the defeat of the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau in the next federal election.

The 1,600 delegates to the week-long biennial convention expressed their views following debate of a number of resolutions critical of the Trudeau administration.

The congress also endorsed a resolution by the Ontario Federation of Labor urging it and its affiliates to "mobolize the fullest possible support in the election for the New Democratic Party from coast to coast."

The resolutions urging a Liberal defeat were submitted by the Ottawa local of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers and by the Vancouver local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

The Vancouver union accused the Trudeau government of deliberately creating a mass unemployment situation to counter inflation.

The Ottawa resolution said the government "has shown itself incompetent to deal with the economic, social, cultural and constitutuional problems of Canada."

Two Garbage Dumpers Were Easily Identified

DELTA (CP) Police said Thursday seven persons are being charged with illegal garbage dumping in Delta. Two of those charged were traced through photographs in a Vancouver newspaper. The other five were either caught in the act or reported by residents, police said. Delta is having problems with people dumping garbage on the road leading to the Vancouver city dump which is closed because of civic workers strike.

Revise Plans

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Capilano College officials said Thursday architects had to revise plans for a new college complex at a North Vancouver site after the provincial government refused to approve $1.42 million in capital funds for the project. College officials said the provincial government has chopped $328,000 from the requested figure and is recommending funding of $1.09 million.

More TB Cases

VANCOUVER (CP) The director of British Columbia's division of tuberculosis control, Dr. David Mowat, Thursday reported 515 active cases of TB discovered in the province last year, an increase of 52 cases over the previous year. He said there will be increased use of a mobile chest X-ray service in communities where miniature X-ray are not available.

Trucks Stranded

SPENCES BRIDGE (CP) Three loaded logging trucks were stranded on the Spences Bridge Indian reserve after they got stuck on the hairpin curves of an old road they were using to get around a blockade. Chief Forrest Walkem told RCMP he wants the trucks taken off the reserve and kept off. He said the road will be closed until he gets a settlement from Weyerhauser Canada Ltd.'s pulp division which he said has been hauling pulp-logs across the reserve without permission.

Rutland Development

KELOWNA (CP) A multi-million-dollar development off Highway 33 in Rutland was approved by the regional district of Central Okanagan. The 15-acre project will include a $2.5 million, three-storey apartment building, a shopping centre and hotel valued at $6 to $10 million, housing for elderly citizens and a shopping centre. Construction is to begin immediately.

RCMP Vets Meet

VANCOUVER (CP) More than 300 RCMP veterans and their wives will meet Friday for the 48th annual general meeting of the RCMP Veterans' Association. Among those attending will be Maj.-Gen. George R. Pearkes, a former lieutenant-governor of B.C. who served with the old Royal North West Mounted Police from 1912 to 1914.

'If You Really Gave'

VANCOUVER (CP) If people really gave as much as they could afford to the lower mainland United Way campaign this year, $2 million more than the official target of $4.4 million could be raised, says Ralph Cunningham, general chairman of this year's campaign. Cunningham told a news conference Thursday that the fund-raising potential of the Vancouver area is great, but that the amount collected in last year's campaign gave Vancouver a standing of seventh out of eight major Candian cities as far as generosity was concerned.

Grants to SFU

BURNABY (CP) — Simon Fraser University scientists have received a total of $805,739 in grants from the National Research Council for more than 100 projects ranging from pure mathematics to geography.

Grants to physicists total $230,800 and will be spent largely for research in solid state physics, the branch of the science which has produced the transistor and some forms of the laser.

Chemists will receive a total of $238,860 in support of a number of projects ranging from biochemistry to physical chemistry.

Grants to biologists total $182,000 and will be used to investigate areas of marine biology, pest control and ecology.

The Dying Art of Talk —Is There a Way Back?

My waste basket has been on time-and-a-half of late, since my name obviously found its way onto a Toronto-based junk mail list, coping with money-back guarantees to make a better man of me.

There's a daily avalanche of literature offering correspondence courses on how to do almost everything. Hardly a day slips by that I don't decline a free, introductory offer to teach me how to breed Chinchillas, how to be a private detective, how to improve what remains of my mind, how to read 10,000 words a minute, how to write for money (a course I desperately need), how to keep bees, hotels, motels and sanity. Just mail the convenient little form and whole new worlds will open.

The offer that intrigues me most, however, is a 12-lesson program from an outfit called The Conversation Clinic with a money-back promise that I may not only enrich my own life, but those of everyone within earshot, presuming they would shut up and pay attention once I've graduated. Conversation, says the brochure, may be used "to manipulate the shuttle that weaves together the threads of fine and worthwhile friendship." I suspect that the line was written by someone who has taken a course in how to write for money.

I don't want to knock this or any other lessons because I hold to the idea that trying to learn anything is better than just sitting around looking out the window, and, besides, this particular offer could hardly be more timely.

Conversation fell upon evil days the moment we dimmed the lights and flicked on the hypnotic eye of a television set. I daresay there are vast numbers of folk who may wonder, from time to time, if they've entirely lost the ability to communicate except to shout back at the tube. (There is a deodorant commercial on now in which a young woman holds up the frock that caused her embarrassment before she found the magic solution and I shout back at that one quite regularly.)

Still, I have certain doubts that conversation is something that may be learned in 12 lessons or even twelve hundred and, even if it could, it might be as dangerous as a course in making bombs. Reading the promises of the Conversation Clinic one can imagine a group of graduates babbling away like magpies or early morning radio announcers. That way, of course, lies madness.

The pamphlet before me merely hints at the clinic's methods, but it does promise to teach the student, in the very first lesson, eight "sure-fire topics of conversation" and how to add interest to "even such themes as talking about the weather," an inducement that won't help sales much in Victoria where hardly anyone talks about anything else.

I keep reflecting moodily on what it would be like to encounter one of the clinic's honor students on a fishing trip. Perhaps nowhere in the world is there a severer test of conversational rapport than in a small boat cut off from escape by deep water. I have been in such circumstances too often with men grimly determined to manipulate the shuttle that weaves together the threads of friendship, men with at least eight sure-fire topics guaranteed to ruin any genuine empathy. Thus I'm all too aware that the world's worst conversationalist is the misguided or insecure gent who thinks that talk must be kept banging over the net or it's no game.

Years ago I took a certain clergyman up to Porlier Pass, a man whose writings I had admired, only to find that he was the sort who keeps leaping, lead-footed, from one weighty subject to another, apparently convinced that conversation is made, not born. Near the end of a long and fishless day I was sure that sheer inertia had stilled him and that we might troll home in blessed silence without any further need for compulsive dialogue. He was silent for perhaps a minute and then, brightly, inquired, "What are your views on cremation?" We never fished again.

The clinic's brochure quotes a resident philosopher to underscore the claim that conversation is the staff of life, to wit: "Long talks before an open fire or discussions under the trees as we walk in the hills may be the deepest joy of life."

No one could quarrel with that, mind you, but it must never be forgotten that conversation, in any setting, is distasteful — "mustard in a child's mouth," as Boswell once noted — if it is anything less than natural and spontaneous. Effortless talk is the second finest communication between two humans. Put it in the mouth of someone who uses it merely to fill a vacuum and it is an intrusion. Men and women have said more to each other before an open fire or on a mountain trail by utter silence.

So I doubt seriously if the clinic's claim may be justified. What might be taught is the art of intelligent listening which is really what we've forfeited in the age of television. The frightening ability to absorb without understanding or contemplation seems sure to be the ultimate curse of the tube. Already we see the conquest of TV over conversation, the viewers capacity for taking in vast quantities of the spoken word without a reciprocating response.

The way back is not in 12 easy lessons, but in a groping, sensitive effort to recapture that art of the face-to-face exchange of ideas. Chinchilla-breeding or hotel management are more easily learned than that.

Peterson Asks Business to Curb Raises

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson today called upon Canadian businessmen to institute a 6.5 per cent limit on increases of wages and salaries.

He said business had to take the lead to keep costs in line in the absence of federal government controls.

Peterson told the convention of Financial Executives Institute at the Empress Hotel:

"The provincial government has been, I think, successful in maintaining a 6.5 per cent limit on increases of wages and salaries paid out of the public purse."

He noted that while restrictions had been imposed in the United States, the federal government in Canda was maintaining a hands-off policy in regards to wage and price increases.

UP TO BUSINESS

"It is up to Canadian business to maintain a limit (to wage increases) if we are to remain competitive and be able to export to the United States."

Peterson's comments came at the end of his welcoming address at the opening session of the conference which has attracted 350 businessmen from Canada and the United States.

He noted that his call for wage restraints went beyond the usual welcome speech but felt it was urgent to make the statement today.

In an interview before the conference began, keynote speaker Frank Capon of Montreal, president of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, said the federal budget reduction in corporation taxes was courageous and a step in the right direction.

"It was less of a political budget and more of a policy budget than could be expected in an election year," Capon said.

He was relieved to see there were no formal restraints on prices or wages as government controls are not long-term solutions.

Business and labor could work out their problems themselves if both sides used restraint.

"It is easy emotionally to say implement wage and price controls. But it is just like putting a cap on the bottle. The pressure builds up."

SMALLER MARKET

A better long-term solution was to let a free market solve its own problems as it would if labor is not too demanding in wage negotiations.

He said if Canadians wanted to maintain an independent nation outside the American orbit we would have to pay the price in terms of lower wages than those in the U.S.

In a market of 20 million it is impossible to reach the level of productivity of the Americans who have a market of 200 million.

Demands for pay parity with the United States could only lead to continental union and loss of the Canadian identity, Capon sid.

Another major speaker at the conference this morning was Kenneth Hall of Vancouver, operations manager of the Trans-Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company.

Discussing costs of the proposed Mackenzie River Valley pipeline, he said:

"No one knows the real cost of laying pipe in the Arctic. Until the first few hundred miles are laid no one will.

"But writers and speakers continue to make economic evaluations and compare alternate routes on a wide variation of cost estimates.

"The present newspaper figure for the 800 mile Alyeska (Alaska) line is $2.5 to $3.5 billion," Hall said.

"A 1,500 mile gas line from Prudhoe Bay to Northern Alberta is quoted at $2 billion. A 2,300 mile gas line from Prudhoe Bay to Southern Manitoba is quoted at $5 billion. Rather wide variations to say the least," he said.

DUCK'S DILEMMA is how to teach youngsters to swim when workmen have drained the water from the training pool — Harbor Yacht Pond on Dallas Road. From the size of the brood, it appeared the mother ducks had elected one of their members as sitter while the rest took a break until the pond has been cleaned of winter's debris and filled again with fresh water. Saanich To Pick Up Centre?

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Victoria isn't going to take the initiative in efforts to develop a convention centre, Saanich should "step in and show some leadership," Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry said today.

Newberry said the city's reaction to Premier Bennett's recent offer to participate in construction costs seemed to be "to make light of it."

"It was a serious offer and it ought to be considered seriously. But if the city is going to disregard it perhaps Saanich might become involved."

Bennett said last month the province would pay one-third of the costs of construction up to a maximum of $2.5 million if the city puts up one-third of the cost plus the land and private enterprise and "individuals" find the remainder.

At the time, city aldermen said the terms of the offer were unacceptable and Mayor Peter Pollen dismissed it as "politicking" on Bennett's part.

Newberry said today a desirable concept would be one providing not only cultural and convention facilities but also embracing such activities as ice skating — in other words a true multi-use centre.

Other than accommodation, there was no reason why such a centre should necessarily be in the centre of the city. "There are areas in Saanich where it could go."

He noted that there is an increasing tendency in Saanich for community organizations to become involved in providing recreational programs and facilities, and said these groups might be willing to participate in a much larger project such as a civic-convention centre.

If Saanich did take the initiative — and Newberry stressed that he hasn't sounded out fellow-aldermen on the idea — it would expect also "to become involved in any revenue" resulting, he added.

Meanwhile, Victoria Ald. Ove Witt suggested the financing problem might be tackled on an intermunicipal basis, as a convention centre would benefit the entire area.

"The city's share would be the largest, of course, because it would benefit the most," he said.

However, Witt questioned the need for such a "grandiose" scheme as that proposed by the Pacific Centre Foundation, for a combined cultural and convention centre on the site of the old Crystal Gardens. Cost of the project has been estimated at $6 to $7 million.

"I would like to see first a 1,500-seat centre primarily for the purpose of conventions."

Track Meet Chopped

The annual district-wide track and field championships for elementary school students will not be held this year in Greater Victoria.

The decision has been made by the Elementary Schools' Sports Council. Reasons given were a lack of time for preparation and the effects of the school board's cutbacks in the 1972 budget.

The usual zone championships will be held this year, with most taking place at Centennial Stadium. However, the over-all championships, with winners of events from the zone meets competing, will not take place.

Bob Campbell, sports council chairman, said bad weather around Easter kept many schools from getting their track and field facilities ready in time for the championships.

The six zone meets will involve about 36 schools, a district spokesman said, and from 3,000 to 4,000 students.

Five of the meets will be held at Centennial Stadium with the other taking place at Esquimalt high school's new facilities.

Mistrust Linked to Oil Deals

Canada is having difficulty convincing Americans it can be trusted to deliver oil over the long term, federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said in Victoria today.

Security of supply, he said, was one of the most difficult problems in negotiations over pipeline routes through Canada.

"I hope we can have an early and substantive exchange of views to clarify the U.S. position. In my view Canada has and will continue to be a secure supplier of petroleum products to U.S. markets," he said.

★ ★ ★

"Yet the decision to proceed with the (Alaska) pipeline revealed the U.S. desire expressed by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton to approve the route in part because the U.S. would retain total jurisdiction and exclusive use of the pipeline moving Prudhoe Bay oil southward to markets."

Macdonald, addressing the convention of Financial Executives Institute at the Empress Hotel, said negotiations would continue with the U.S. in an effort to obtain joint use of a Canadian route.

★ ★ ★

He added that Canada was watching with concern the U.S. decision to proceed with the Alaska route.

"We are still far from assured that out coastline will be adequately protected from the hazards of major oil spills resulting from stepped up tanker traffic and our representations for protection will continue."

Macdonald noted that Canada is running a rapidly increasing surplus of exports over imports of oil and natural gas.

Over the long term new policies may have to be devised to reverse this flow as Canada's own needs increase.

"Canada's requirements for oil and natural gas in the year 2000 may well be three or four times the amounts used in 1970."

"Just to meet Canadian requirements, we can expect to need additional reserves approximately equal to all proven reserves to date," Macdonald said.

He said it was important that investment capital to finance oil and gas exploration and development be raised to a larger extent in Canada than has been the case up to now.

"We are entering a phase in our development when we can lean more heavily on our own resources.

"This, of course, should not be construed to mean that we no longer need or want foreign help and capital in the development of our economy but rather that Canadians are capable of carrying a bigger load than they have been carrying and that they should have the opportunity of investing in our future growth."

Stores Sought For Development

Negotiations with major store operators are under way for development of a $1 million shopping centre on treed land opposite Saanich municipal hall.

Property manager Richard Talbot said Anglo-Canadain Management Co. Ltd. is planning tentatively to have the centre open in 1973.

A submission is expected to be made to Saanich planning department in two or three weeks.

Buildings would cover some 100,000 square feet, the maximum permissible for the site, and surrounding parking area would be installed with a view to landscaping, retaining as many as possible of the trees remaining from the former residential - greenhouse - undeveloped land.

Talbot said three major stores are envisaged, including a food outlet and a junior department store of some 20,000 square feet each and a large drug store of 10,000 to 20,000 square feet in area.

The remaining space would be divided between about 10 specialty stores, Talbot said.

Former owner of the site is Kelly Douglas and Co. Ltd., which may still be interested in the property for lease purposes following development.

A strong demand for retail accommodation exists in the north Douglas area, where rents at Town and Country shopping centre have risen to $6.25 a square foot.

Talbot said Town and Country has the highest traffic volume per week of any Victoria shopping centre, and the new site lying in the next block north is a prime site with good exposure to traffic moving to Patricia Bay Highway.

The acreage is almost triangular, bounded by Vernon on the east, Douglas on the west and Seymour on the southwest corner. On the south side is a section of CNR right of way, which at that point lies in the bottom of a 30-foot cut.

COURSE IDEAS WANTED

Camosun College's community services division is looking to the public for help in planning its courses for next year.

Ideas for courses are being welcomed for anyone. All the college has to do is find a suitable instructor and try to make the course economically viable.

Community services director Alan Batey said today that "now is the time" for the community to let the planners at Camosun know their feelings about courses, rather than wait for the offerings to be established.

"This is the planning of a full community program and we are anxious that that community have an input," Batey said. He said letters or phone calls should be addressed to him at the college for people who have course suggestions.

Camosun's community services program offers about 500 courses over the year and involves between 12,000 and 13,000 persons.

Nonsuch Welcomed by Throng

Canada's early history came alive today for the thousands jammed the Causeway and the Victoria coastline to welcome the 53-foot ketch Nonsuch.

An exact copy of the ship, whose 17th-century fur-trading expedition began a commercial empire, the Nonsuch received a reception seldom offered those afloat.

Ships tooted whistles — as did an onshore paint plant, a fire tug led her in, spilling water skywards.

On dock to greet the replica and her crew was a large crowd of notables from Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Premier Bennett to an agog section of Greater Victoria mayors and aldermen.

Members of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps formed an honor guard dockside and the cadet band hustled forth lively music.

Fittingly enough, one of the pieces was Alouette, stirring memories of the French-Canadian traders Pierre Radisson and Sieur des Groseilliers, whose urgings resulted in the commissioning of the Nonsuch's historic journey.

Even royalty attended today's ceremony. Sitting in the Nonsuch's stern as she came alongside was "King Charles II," the king who gave the Hudson's Bay Company its charter after Nonsuch returned to England from Canada.

As she eased into the Inner Harbor under power but with sails listlessly flying, the Nonsuch returned the noisy greetings with a few salutes, fired broadside, of her own.

Many wondered how her namesake's crew must have fared crossing the stormy Atlantic in such a tiny craft.

Today was the day for dignitaries.

From now until May 29 Victoria's citizenry will also be able to admire close-hand the imagination-stirring vessel.

The Nonsuch will be open to the public each day from 7 to 9 p.m. and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

Summer over, the Nonsuch will 'swallow the anchor' and head for Winnipeg where she will be on permanent display at the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

AUSSIE HOCKEY TOURISTS TRIM PROVINCIAL SQUAD

New South Wales kept the record straight Thursday night at the University of Victoria.

The Australian women's field hockey side crushed B.C. Reps 4-1 for a second straight tour victory. On Tuesday, the "down-under" girls blanked Vancouver Island reps, 3-0.

Centre-forward Jill Hawkins of Victoria also played well and a Vancouver duo — Sue Rich and Judy Sewell — were standouts on defence.

B.C. goalkeeper Joyce Harris of Vancouver, recently back from playing for Canada in the world championships in New Zealand, was beaten on two quick shots just before the intermission.

The Australians now head for the University of British Columbia, where they will take part in a three-day jamboree at the weekend.

Bays Bow to Bohemians

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Limerick Bohemians, the touring Irish rugby side, kept their Canadian tour record intact Thursday night by downing Oak Bay Wanderers 10-3 in a loosely-played match at Centennial Stadium.

Led by scrum-half Brian Cox and fullback Tony Hickie, the Irish visitors kept steady pressure on the hometown Wanderers and took advantage of slight chinks in Oak Bay's defensive armor to nip in for two tries, one at each end of the game.

The match lacked much of the wide-open attacking and long rushes often found in international matches, but the closeness of the score, which stayed at 6-3 through the entire second half to the final play of the game, kept the 400 spectators alert.

First blood was drawn at about the 10-minute mark when Bohemians' standoff Joe Burke, kicking for goal from about 35 yards, booted the ball wide of the posts.

Oak Bay fullback Don Burgess, playing in his last game, bobbled the ball about a yard deep in his end-zone and Limerick break-forward Nial Barkman dashed in and fell on it for a try. Burke converted to make it 6-0.

Burgess got a bit of momentum back for Wanderers at the 35-minute mark when he booted a 35-yard penalty goal.

However, that was as far as the Wanderers got on the scoreboard. Burgess, who did not play one of his better games, missed three long penalty attempts, while the Limerick defenders closed the door on whatever passing sorties the Wanderers could muster.

Cox, the diminutive Irish scrum-half, kept the Wanderers on the defensive with deft kick-throughs and excellent service to his standoff Burke. Cox's hard work paid off on the last play of the game when he drove over for a try in the corner after a set scrum at the 10-yard line.

He came into the back-line well for the overlap, was quick to pounce on Oak Bay kick-throughs and led several sideline dashes, outfooting Oak Bay pursuers with his looping runs.

Oak Bay backs, notably standoff Tim Cummings, a veteran player who has represented B.C. and Canada, performed well on defence, stifling attacking movements with good tackling.

Several times the hefty Burke took a run at Cummings, who stood his ground each time and cut Burke down with solid hits.

Limerick's other tour victories came in a 12-9 decision over Calgary Irish, a 19-9 win over Calgary All-Stars, and an 8-0 shutout of Vancouver Capilanos Tuesday.

In upcoming exhibition games, Bridgend of Wales will play Island champion Castaways at 7 p.m. Saturday at Centennial Stadium. The Welsh visitors will also participate in a seven-a-side tournament beginning at 2 p.m. Monday at McDonald Park.

James Bay Athletic Association will provide the opposition for a Wednesday match with Bridgend at 8 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

Policemen Still On Way But Festival Has Arrived

The way the story started was that there were these 12 policemen who were running all the way from the Mexican border through the United States to Vancouver.

Well, the purpose of their trip apparently was two-fold.

1. It was an event to honor and pay tribute to policemen everywhere who had been killed in the line of duty.

2. It was to be a feature of the third annual B.C. Festival of Sports.

If one cause celebre is better than the other, it's easy enough to recognize, but running all the way up here to get the idea across is something else again.

At any rate, the policemen are still on their merry way, and Thursday at approximately 12:15 p.m., they were at "that great B.C. metropolis of Midway."

Author of that statement was TV commentator Ted Reynolds, brought to the city at great expense for the occasion.

"Midway," said Reynolds to a perplexed B.C. cabinet, "is somewhere between nowhere and anywhere . . . and they (the policemen) should be in Vancouver this weekend."

Reynolds was emceeing the traditional treatment of putting the torch to the cairn, commemorating the third annual Festival of Sports. The official act was performed by Premier Bennett, who had the lighted torch delivered to him in front of the Legislature by Billy Baker of 100-Mile House.

Each Sport Had Own Representative

Baker brought his own athletic credentials with him. He arrived on horseback, befitting his stature in the sporting community. Last year, Baker, who now is 18, won the all-round cowboy title at the provincial high school rodeo championships.

Besides Baker, and his princesses, there were 47 other boys and girls present, each representing a sport that will form a part of this year's festival. And each and every sport was introduced, if not the representative. Impressive? Well . . . different.

The festival itself has been highly publicized, both at home and abroad, and if it has been much maligned at times, that huge advertising budget is one of the main reasons why. Also there is the charge that most of the events would be held anyway; and further, many feel the money could be spent in better ways.

So, what else is new? And it is true that many of the events are co-incidental with the festival; but there are many more that have resulted because of it. And basically, it is no sacred secret that the B.C. Department of Travel Industry sponsors the Festival for other reasons than simply a love of sport.

"Travel" is the name of that game, and was borne out by the Premier himself on Thursday when he said of previous festivals:

"Travel for competitors, their families, and friends, has also reached record proportions. Highway traffic has been reported at peak density during Festival weekends, and our B.C. ferries also note unusually heavy traffic volume during the Festival period."

For Many, There Is Deep Interest

However, for many there is a deep interest in the Festival. Frank Bain once said: "We want everyone to get involved." And certainly thousands of young athletes are being catered to, and competition is encouraged, and promoted. Which is good.

And perhaps in time, out of it all will come a much better aid system for the athletes, and better programs on a provincial level. The ideas have been spilling out. Some need to be redirected, that's all.

And in an otherwise generous assessment (it was a nice day), there honestly does seem that each succeeding year a bigger government effort is being made to co-ordinate sports, and even push the development of athletes in the province.

Still, no government is perfect. And further advice on the subject will be given here from time to time and at no extra charge.

Such as with the case of those poor policemen, who have been running "non-stop" (is that what the story said?), from the Mexican border here.

When they left Tijuana, they were typical swashbuckling, two-gun sheriff types. That's the Mexican way of law and order. But when they arrived at the Canadian border, the customs men said: Oh, no, you don't.

The U.S. policemen were promptly disarmed, then allowed to continue — naked, as it were.

And this is where the Festival goes all wrong in its claim to being the greatest event of its kind in North America.

Rapid Start Helps 'Bellies

SURREY — New Westminster Salmonbellies are tied for first place with Victoria Shamrocks in the Western Lacrosse Association after scoring seven goals in the opening period Thursday night and going on to defeat Cpquitlam Adanacs 15-10 before about 700 fans.

It was the first meeting between the teams this season. Coquitlam coach Bob Marsh said his team took too long adjusting to the unfamiliar North Surrey Arena but he was pleased with their effort in the last half of the game.

New Westminster playing-coach Paul Parnell applauded the defensive work of Ken Winzoski and the offensive play of Wayne Goss and Tracy Wright. Parnell, Goss, Wright and Jim Giles scored two goals each for the Salmonbellies while singles went to Mickey Lynch, Dave Matheson, Larry Henry, Al Lewthwaite, Fred Greenwood, Ken Winzoski and Ed Goss.

Coquitlam was led by Nick Delmonico, who scored three goals.

Short-Hitter Shares Lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Arnold Palmer lost a wristwatch. Billy Maxwell found the fairways. And a flock of the touring pros were looking for the shortest way home.

That was the situation after one day's play in the $175,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis open golf classic as more than a half dozen players pulled out of the first round and the diminutive Maxwell, a notoriously short— but accurate —hitter, moved into a share of the lead.

Palmer, meanwhile, became so flustered when he discovered he had lost a $1,200 wristwatch somewhere on the course that he took a three-over-par seven and had to rally to salvage a 71 and remain in contention.

The 5-foot-6 Maxwell, who hasn't won in the last decade while courses got longer and his fellow pros stronger, missed only two fairways on the long, demanding Colonial Country Club course, and posted a three-under-par 69.

He was tied at that figure with Gibby Gilbert and Hubert Green going into Friday's second round in the chase for a $35,000 first prize.

Bates Remember Stan

Now Victoria fans get their chance.

The five-team, two-day tournament gets under way at 11 a.m. Saturday and winds up with a game starting at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Kern, rated by Bates' manager John Oster as one of Canada's top softball pitchers, will carry the hopes of Edmonton Sun Life. Bates and the Suns will be joined by Seattle Pay 'n' Pak, Vancouver Canadians and Everett Olys in the round-robin event, a departure from the customary double-knockout tournament.

"We were fortunate to be able to get Edmonton," explained Oster. "When a team like that comes this far, it would be a shame to have them lose two games and then head back home. The round-robin guarantees them four games."

It was Kern who thwarted Bates' hopes of a sweep in a best-of-five, Alberta-B.C. playoff last summer. Recruited for the playoffs by Edmonton Playboys, Kern fired a two-hitter to give the Alberta champs their first victory.

Bates eventually won the series, 3-2, to advance to the national finals at Halifax.

Homers Pace Paint Victory

Impressive batting helped Empress Paint to a 20-4 triumph over Tillicum Athletic in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game Thursday night at Hyacinth Park.

Ann Kilduff connected for a grand-slam home run and Donna Blackstock brought in three runs with another homer to lead the victory.

Swift Supers to Run

Some of the fastest superstocks in North America will be on hand Saturday to open a big weekend of car-racing action at Western Speedway.

Gary Kershaw leads the list of local entrants in the event, which includes a 100-lap feature race. Kershaw, in his 1969 Chevelle, picked up his first NASCAR main event win of the season two weeks ago at Evergreen Speedway, Monroe, Wash.

Out-of-town visitors will include former Grand National driver Sam Rose, who moved to Yakima from California two years ago. Last season he finished fourth in the NASCAR division and is currently running first in overall points.

Jack Jeffery of Seattle, a familiar face to local racing fans, will also be here. He is running fourth in standings and established a new track record at Evergreen Speedway two weeks ago.

Total purse for the Saturday event will be about $3,000.

Time trials will start at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

On Monday, local superstocks will return to action along with stocks and claimers for two events. Time trials will begin at 1 and 7 p.m. and the annual fireworks display will be held during the evening contest.

Salmon, Trout Prospects Look Good for Weekend

Salmon and trout catches around Vancouver Island appear to be picking up at a rapid pace — just in time for the long holiday weekend.

There are indications, such as the 40-pounder caught Sunday by Dave Wigmore off Beechey Head, that the Columbia River run of springs has arrived in Sooke to Pedder Bay waters.

Several catches of springs in the 20-pound range as well as the odd blueback were reported near Otter Point and Secretary Island last weekend. Since then, however, windy weather has put a crimp in fishing activity.

"Mainly springs" is the word for Oak Bay. These fish tip the scales up to 22 pounds and have been found in 100 to 125 feet of water off Discovery Island and in The Gap. Super-strip is the favored rig and early morning the best time.

Large tides seem to have slowed things down off Deep Cove although several limits of jacks and blues were taken up "until two days ago."

Springs and a scattering of blues are being landed in the northern part of Saanich Inlet. Productive spots might be from the Tod Inlet entrance to McKenzie Bay, from Bamberton to McCurdy Point and from Deep Hole to Stone House as well as in Indian and Coles bays.

Strip and minnow are the old stand-bys, but a fair number of fish are coming in on four or four-and-a-half Tom Macks or No. 2 Krippled K spoons.

Further south in the Inlet, jacks and blues may be found in the vicinity of Goldstream Island, Chesterfield Rock and Misery Bay.

Waters off Maple Bay, Crofton and Tent Island are producing springs while blues in the same locations are getting bigger and schools are starting to break up.

Fishing for blues is "good" in all areas off Nanaimo and "Curley" Marback of Nanaimo found good fishing for steelhead in the salt-chuck Wednesday while spin-casting a Krokodile off some rocks in the vicinity of Piper's Lagoon. His steelie was unusually bright for an ocean-caught fish and weighed in at 17 pounds.

On the west coast of the Island, springs up to 30 pounds are being landed in Rainy Bay (at the mouth of the Alberni Canal) by fishermen using planers.

Out from Campbell River, springs are being boated in Frenchman's Pool, Duncan Bay, Copper Bluff and Quathiaski Cove while blues form the main return off Cape Mudge and near the Red Buoy.

★ ★ ★

As to trout angling:

Elk, Prospect, Durrance and Dougan's lakes on the southern end of the Island have proven very productive.

A black ant hatch over the weekend at Wild Deer Lake sent the trout into a feeding frenzy and enabled a number of anglers to fill their limits.

Quamichan and Someno lakes are still yielding trout to bait and the upper reaches of the Cowichan River are giving up browns to fly fishermen.

Other outstanding spots on the Island are small lakes in the Ash River system, Nahmint River (steelhead), most lakes in Sayward Forest area and Upper as well as Lower Campbell lakes.

NIBBLES:: Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association are reminded of the monthly Sunburn Derby on Sunday . . . hours are from dawn to 2 p.m.

Anyone heading up-Island for the holiday weekend might wish to take part in the Campbell River Lions Club trout derby on Sunday from dawn to 4 p.m. on lakes in the area . . . weigh-in stations will be located at MacIvor and Loveland lakes.

Oak Bay Takes Crown

NIPS LANDSOWNE TEAM

Oak Bay came on strong in the last few events Thursday to capture first place in the 18th annual Greater Victoria junior high school track and field meet at Centennial Stadium.

Bays, last winners in 1969, took the aggregate trophy for the fourth time with 241 points after a tense struggle with runner-up Lansdowne, which has won the meet a total of 10 times including seven straight years between 1957 and 1963.

Lansdowne finished with 227 points while third-place Arbutus accumulated 151½. Defending-champion Central finished fifth with 103 points, 32 less than fourth-place Colquitz.

Oak Bay and Lansdowne were tied with 180 points each an hour from the end of the meet. A little later, Bays crept into a 192-190 lead but Lansdowne reversed it to gain a 216-212 advantage with only a few events remaining.

Enthusiasm among supporters of both schools ran high and Bays finally ground ahead 222-216 with a field event and two relays left.

Then the Oak Bay crew put on its power finish.

Dave Kirzinger, a burly athlete that earlier had won the shot put, carried off first place in the discus throw. Best Lansdowne placing was a fifth by Blake Hannah.

Oak Bay won the junior girls' 1,600-metre relay and placed second in the boys' race. Lansdowne teams had failed to qualify earlier this week for either event.

Although there was no individual awards in the meet, Bruce Vye of Lansdowne turned in an outstanding performance.

He won the junior boys' 100-metre dash in a record 11.4 seconds, smashed the 200-metre mark with a time of 22.7 seconds and placed second in the long jump.

The young speedster also figured prominently in an exciting junior boys' 1,600-metre relay.

Collecting the baton a stride or two behind Bays' Kevin Leighton, Vye poured on the power to give Lansdowne the victory by inches.

Tony Elwell of Arbutus was the only other athlete in the meet to snap two records, setting marks in the midget boys' 800 meres (2:14.8) and 1,500 metres (4:30.1).

Regals, Stars Salute Stan

Victoria Regals of the Premier Soccer League battle Victoria and District League All-Stars in a special "Salute to Stan Wiseman" match Saturday at Victoria High School.

Wiseman, a 44-year-old fullback for Oak Bay in the District League's first division, retires this year to take up coaching.

He began his playing career as a juvenile in 1942, graduated to senior ranks in 1945 and subsequently played under the banners of Victoria Machinery Depot, Saanich Thistles, Heaneys, Tillicums, Canadian Scottish and Oak Bay.

Ferguson Leads Labs to Victory

Cec Ferguson, who recently graduated from junior golf ranks where he was among the best in the province, again proved he can also handle a bat Thursday by pacing Labatts to an 8-7 Stuffy McGinnis Softball League victory over Molsons at Heywood Avenue Park.

Ferguson blasted a run-scoring triple in the final inning to tie the count and then crossed the plate for the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Skip Porteous.

Labs, now enjoying sole possession of first place, were trailing 7-3 in the sixth inning. After scoring two unearned runs, Labs came up with the last-turn rally.

Barry Granger scored on a single by Ron McDonald, who in turn came in on Ferguson's three-bagger to even the score.

Eagles, Builders Share Top Spot

Eagles and Capital Builders advanced into first place Thursday after scoring decisive victories in the Industrial Softball League.

Eagles trounced London Boxing Club 16-3 and Capital Builders bounced winless Langford Drywall, 9-4. Castaways, the former leader, fell one point behind the two clubs after dropping a 5-1 decision to B.C. Tel in the third game of the evening.

Races Spice Cruising Trips

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

Skippers of both power cruisers and sailboats will be taking advantage of the long holiday weekend, combining cruising with a side helping of racing to make things interesting.

Members of the Victoria Cruising Club will be competing in a little predicted log racing, heading for Burgoyne Bay for lunch Saturday and spending the night at Manana Lodge.

On Sunday they'll set out for Montague, passing throught Telegraph Ditch and Retreat Cove. There'll be a noon break at Otter Bay Monday on the way home.

Keel boats of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club plan to spend the weekend at Bedwell Harbor, racing there Saturday. Start time is set for 10 a.m.

The second race in the round-Discovery-Island series takes place Saturday. Racing on a reverse handicap system, the first boats will get their start gun at 1 p.m.

Combining forces with the Sierra Club, members of the Victoria Canoe Club will spend the holiday weekend in the Nitinat area.

The big winner was Dave Christian's new Islander 29, Sea Whip. After her came Bert Buchanan's Lairig Ghru, Bud Peetz's Saki, Peter White's White Squall and Geoff Greenhalgh's Yo Yo.

First boat home and first over-all was Gordie Vickery's Valhalla. Next came four Thunderbirds — Glen Higgins' Freeway, John Booth's Umpka, Stan Cosburn's Wild Thing and Ron Saunders' Irrawaddy.

THSA will be racing again at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

★ ★ ★

Royal Vic. sailors had another session of series racing Wednesday.

In Cal 20s it was Mike Fraser's Windless, followed by Don North's Pegasus and Roy Barber's Tongariro.

Unco-operative fog banks that obscured the outward mark on the American side of the Strait of Juan de Fuca and made identification of finishing boats impossible when they sailed over the finish line is posing problems for the race committee of Royal Vic's 48-mile overnight sailout to Crescent Rock.

They're checking out recorded finishing times with the various boats and tracing down those who failed to round the fog-hidden mark.

Results should be available next week when the whole process of elimination has been completed.

Ingarfield Quits Post With Pats

REGINA (CP) — Earl Ingarfield has resigned as coach of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League. Ingarfield told a club banquet Thursday that he has accepted the position of chief western scout for New York Islanders, a new entry in the National Hockey League next season.

Seaboard Hurlers Share One-Hitter

Glen Bullen and Barry Wilkin shared pitching duties Thursday night to produce a one-hitter and Seaboard Construction romped to a 12-0 shutout over Churchill Hotel in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

Wilkin replaced Bullen on the mound in the fifth inning and carried on hitless hurling until the bottom of the seventh—when Don Middleton spoiled the duo's bid for a no-hitter.

Aussies Sweep Tennis Series

BANGALORE, India (AP) — Australia's Davis Cup tennis team completed a 5-0 sweep of the eastern zone finals Thursday when Ross Case defeated Anand Amrithraj, 6-1, 8-6, 7-5, and Geoff Masters stopped Amrithraj's brother Vijay, 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. Australia won the earlier singles on Tuesday and the doubles on Wednesday.

Curt Blefary Joins Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres and Oakland Athletics have completed a four-player deal that sends Ollie Brown to the Athletics and lefthand hitting Curt Blefary to the Padres.

Record Entry In Junior Test

Gorge Vale southpaw Bob Beauchemin and Keith Burrell of Uplands are being rated the pre-tournament favorites to move onto the Victoria City junior golf throne.

A record 104 entrants will tee off in the 36-hole championship at the weekend, but the list won't include Sid Murdoch. Last year's champion has graduated from junior ranks.

Play will get under way Saturday at Gorge Vale and wind up Sunday at Uplands.

Following is Saturday's draw and starting times. Competitors are asked to note that Sunday's draw will be the same but starting times will be exactly one hour earlier.

Servant Wage Ceiling Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — A wage ceiling may be advisable for senior civil servants in Manitoba, Premier Ed Schreyer said Thursday, touching on a labor area that has caused major repercussions in Ontario and Quebec.

Schreyer expressed concern about the amount of recent salary increases to senior civil servants.

"I am not calling for a pay freeze," he said. "But future pay increases must be lower than they have been in the past eight years."

Without giving figures, he said that while these salaries are higher than ever before in Manitoba, they are still well below those paid by Quebec, Ontario and by the federal government.

However, he said that since 1965, pay increases for senior officials have been about 7½ per cent a year.

Fly Attack Studied

EDMONTON (CP) — A scientist says Canada may undertake a $1 million, five-year project aimed at mass production of tiny worms to control disease-bearing black flies in East and West Africa.

Dr. Marshall Laird, an expert in parasitology at Memorial University in Newfoundland, said in an interview the project also would try to develop mass production methods for three natural enemies of black flies and mosquitoes found in Canada.

Klan in Alberta ?

EDMONTON (CP) — Attorney-General Merv Leitch said Thursday he will study existing law on discrimination before considering any action on the formation of a Ku Klux Klan group in Alberta.

Grant Notley, the New Democratic Party leader, mentioned the group when he asked in the legislature whether Leitch was aware that the Confederate Klans of Alberta had applied for incorporation under the Societies Act.

Oil Tax Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — A 33 per cent production tax should be levied on Alberta oil to give Albertans a revenue return comparable to that in other countries, the Committee for an Independent Canada said Thursday.

The Edmonton chapter of the committee, in its brief to the legislative public hearing starting Tuesday on the Alberta government's proposed $50 to $90 million tax on proven oil reserves, said the government plan would encourage rapid depletion of Alberta's oil reserves and not result in an adequate return.

School Damaged

The adjoining junior and senior high school was undamaged.

Sewer Aid Proposed

EDMONTON (CP) — A program will be established to financially assist municipalities to pay for sewage disposal facilities, the Alberta government said in a position paper tabled in the legislature.

The position paper, on financial assistance for pollution control, said the program will go into effect in fiscal 1973-74 and will initially cost the government about $1 million a year.

19 Do Abortions

EDMONTON (CP) — Therapeutic abortions are performed in 19 Alberta general hospitals, Neil Crawford, minister of health and social development, said in the legislature Thursday.

A hospital must be accredited by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation before it can perform abortions and 41 Alberta general hospitals have such accreditation, Crawford said. Of these, 22 do not perform abortions, including 12 operated by religious orders and 10 by municipal hospital districts.

80-Year-Old Chosen

George Tillisch has organized and helped operate recreation programs for boys since he came to Calgary in 1947 and is still an active director in the area. He came to Canada from Denmark in 1926 and moved to Taber, Alta., in 1929 where he first became involved in youth organizations.

50 Plants Seen For Oil Sands

CALGARY (CP) — Full development of the Athabasca oil sands will be a challenge "greater in magnitude than Alberta and Canada have ever faced in peacetime," says F. K. Spragins.

Speaking before the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, the president of Syncrude Canada Ltd. forecast that the Athabasca oil sands have sufficient reserves for as many as 50 plants the size of the proposed 125,000-barrels-a-day Syncrude operation, tenatively scheduled to begin operation in 1976.

To build these plants at the north eastern Alberta deposits, Spragins said, would require 10,000 to 12,000 construction workers and $2 to $3 billion locked up in continual construction, as well as a vast body of scientific and managerial expertise.

Extraction of the 86 billion barrels of currently recoverable oil in the sands twice the proven North American reserves of conventional oil, will be "an extremely high risk venture," Spragins said, and will require co-operation between government, business and labor to create the necessary facilities in time to satisfy the demand. Development regulations and taxation would have to be "realistic."

But if this vast effort can be mounted, there was every reason to expect that the sands can eventually become a tremendous new source of prosperity for Alberta, producing not only vast quantities and several metals as well.

Although the conventional oil industry in Alberta still has much to do, Spragins said, "additional supplies of oil will be required to meet the increasing demands of energy in North America. Both the conventional oil industry and the Athabasca tar sands working together will not, in all likelihood, be able to supply all the potential markets for Alberta oil that are sure to develop."

Volkswagen Facing Calif. Sales Ban

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Volkswagen and Chrysler Corp. have been asked to supply more cars for testing because three-quarters of the Volkswagens and 60 per cent of the Chrysler vehicles checked failed to meet exhaust emission standards.

If further testing does not improve Volkswagen's showing, "we will have no other way out than to just hold up the sales," A. J. Haagen-Smith, chairman of the state Air Resources Board, said Wednesday. No such threat was made against Chrysler.

G. C. Haas, chief of the board's vehicle emissions control program, said the results of tests on General Motors and Ford vehicles were "pretty good . . . but in the case of Chrysler and VW, we found quite a high number of failures. These are disturbing to us."

Beginning this year, tests are required on 25 per cent of the cars built on regular assembly lines to determine whether their emission-control systems are as effective in practice as those on the prototypes the state examined earlier.

Singer-Girl-Friend-Gopher

SASKATOON (CP) — A homegrown musical fantasy about a rock singer, his girlfriend and a gopher opens the 1972 Canada Theatre festival Sunday night.

Six days later, a special program of plays for children will end the non-adjudicated festival which, during the week, will have featured several Canadian plays.

The opener, Saskatchewan I'm Coming Home, was written by Danielle Fortosky, a Saskatoon high school teacher for Homecoming '71 when the province invited former residents to visit. It is to be presented by the Feehan high school group.

A University of New Brunswick cast from Moncton is to present La Nuit des Assassins Monday night, a play about three adolescents' dreams of murdering their parents.

The Ecstasy of Rita Joe, written by former Edmonton playwright George Riga and scheduled Tuesday night, is about two young British Columbia Indians who are destroyed by Vancouver's social environment. It is to be presented by a Medicine Hat college group.

Wednesday night, Commedia del Arte—a comedy which features improvisation by the players—is to be done by the Del Gelosia Compania of St. Catharines.

The Disintegration of James Cherry, written by Jeff Wanshel and presented by a University of New Brunswick cast from Fredericton, is to be on stage Thursday night. It's a play of 35 short scenes about a nightmare.

Friday night, an original Canadian rock musical, The Fool's Jewel by William Horrocks of Winnipeg, is to be done by the Tec-Voe Travellers of Winnipeg. It takes place in England before the Third Crusade.

Hadrian the Seventh, a man's fantasy about becoming pope, ends the evening presentations Saturday. A Broadway hit written by Peter Luke, it is to be presented by the Gateway Players of Saskatoon.

As well as the evening plays, which begin at 8 p.m. CST, five afternoon plays are scheduled Monday to Friday, including Antonine Millet's Sagouine les Feux-Chalins by a Moncton group on Tuesday.

Monday's play is Babel by the St. Francis Xavier performing group from Antigonish, N.S.; Wednesday's is Mary by the Company 1 of Victoria; Thursday's is Bury the Dead by the Dalhousie Musical and Dramatic Society of Halifax; and Friday's is Fragments by Le Theatre Francias d'Edmonton.

Two children's matinees are scheduled Monday and three each Tuesday to Friday.

BUTCHART GARDENS WELCOMES YOU EVERY DAY, 9 A.M. TO 7:30 P.M. GAY AND COLORFUL . . . NOW PRESENTING "SPRINGTIME '72." Helped by the lush growing season, never, ever, have these gardens been lovelier or more inviting. Dotted with dogwoods, the countryside is magnificent, too. So drive out now . . . this HOLIDAY WEEKEND for sure!

To add to your pleasure the Flower Restaurant serves delicious lunches and afternoon teas every day, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and the coffee and snack bar is always open.

THE BUTCHART GARDENS are actually six gardens in one—the fabulous Sunken Garden, Lake Garden featuring the "Ross Fountains," English Rose, stately Italian, quaint Japanese and the great Stage Show Garden. Plus the exotic Show Greenhouse, Begonia Bower and the fascinating Seed and Gift Shop. Every walkway, nook and corner is spilling over with gorgeous blossoms.

30 acres in all, surrounded by some of Mother Nature's finest natural scenery. Here at the Butchart Gardens you'll find "Springtime '72" at its very best. Plan now for a great day!

Vote Cost Bill 'Too Weak'

OTTAWA (CP) — Two opposition spokesmen showed Thursday night they want even more restriction on election campaign expenses than the government is proposing.

Conservative and New Democrat spokesmen criticized the government for not limiting the amount of money political parties could spend in a campaign.

Conservative Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough) and New Democrat Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre) observed that the bill only limits the spending of individual candidates—not parties.

They commented on the bill after Privy Council President Allan MacEachen said the bill would go far to put all candidates on an equal footing because it would remove the advantages richer candidates have had in the past.

The bill would limit individual election spending on paid advertising. It limits TV and radio time to a total of 6½ hours on any one station for all parties during a campaign, provides for reimbursement of some individual expenses and calls for disclosure in general terms of the source of campaign expenses.

Mr. Benjamin said the worst hole in the legislation is the failure to limit party spending. This not only detracted from the bill but "causes me more worry and doubt about the government's sincerity."

Mr. Macquarrie said: "Let's not pretend we are really putting a limit on what parties will be spending."

He moved an amendment expressing regret that the bill failed to provide adequate reform and to provide for shorter election campaigns.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux was to rule later whether the amendment was in order.

Mr. MacEachen, introducing the bill on second reading, said there is nothing sinister about the government decision to introduce the bill this week. Priority had been given other legislation the government considered more important.

But the two opposition spokesmen wondered aloud about the bill arriving in Parliament at a time when many consider Prime Minister Trudeau may call an election at any time.

"I hope I am proven wrong but was this bill introduced so that Liberal candidates could wave it in their hands during the coming election campaign?" asked Mr. Benjamin.

SAY IT'S LACKING

Both complained that the bill does not go far enough to force disclosure of sources of election campaign contributions.

The bill calls for disclosure of names of contributors to the funds of individual candidates but requires only broad description of the sources—unions, corporations, individuals—who make donations to parties.

Mr. MacEachen said the bill follows the recommendation of an all-party parliamentary committee last year and a private study in Montreal.

Both concluded that disclosure of contributor names would be an invasion of privacy and violate secrecy rights. There was a danger that funds from legitimate sources would dry up.

Mr. Benjamin said party expenditures should be limited to 30 cents an elector. He said this would amount to a limit of $4,200,000 for each party if the census figures of last June were used.

Mr. Macquarrie said the bill appeared to have been put together hastily to fulfil Mr. Trudeau's 1968 election promise that such legislation would get top priority by his government.

He said a permanent voters list should be established. This would permit an election to be held within a month of its being called.

The bill would limit campaign expenses for each candidate to $1 for each of the first 15,000 electors in a riding, 50 cents for each of the next 10,000 and 25 cents for each elector thtreafter.

STICKY FINGER CLAMPS

TORONTO (CP) Penalties to stores which display valuable but easy-to-steal merchandise have been urged by the National Conference on Disposition of Offenders in Canada.

Judges, Crown attorneys, lawyers and law enforcement and parole board met for 2½ days of closed discussions on ways of dealing with offenders.

T. C. Willett, Queen's University sociologist, said his group discussed the possibility of having insurance payments denied to self-serve stores with attractive displays, when they claim for stolen merchandise.

Other proposals included:

—Decreasing maximum sentences which now are "unrealistically high" and dropping minimum sentences for some offences.

Hydro Gas Line Bid Labelled Too Low

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer for an opposition bidder claimed Thursday that B.C. Hydro underestimated costs for pipelines to serve Vancouver Island and Powell River with natural gas.

C. D. Williams, lawyer for Pacific Northern Gas Co. — a subsidiary of Westcoast Transmission — said construction costs of B.C. Hydro's plan for piping gas to Vancouver Island would reach $64.5 million rather than the $50.7 million figure given by the crown corporation.

The Public Utilities Commission is hearing applications by Hydro and four private companies for permission to build the pipelines.

Williams said his figure for Hydro's costs included system expansion planned up to 1980 and indirect costs such as the expense of financing.

He asked a Hydro representative if he thought that "to give a figure like that ($50.7 million) is misleading".

Alaster McPherson, engineering department manager for Hydro's gas division, said his company's $50.7 million figure in the letter accompanying its application was an initial direct construction cost.

B.C. Hydro and Georgia Gulf Transmission Co. Ltd. have proposed obtaining gas from Westcoast at Huntington in the Fraser Valley, with an underwater crossing of Georgia Strait in the south and a second underwater crossing back to Powell River.

The three other bidders — Pacific Northern, Centennial Natural Gas Pipeline Ltd. and Malaspina Gas Pipeline Co. Ltd. — plan a route from the Westcoast transmission line at Williams Lake and crossing Georgia Strait in the Powell River-Comox area.

Georgia Gulf has estimated its costs at $56 million while the other private companies made estimates of between $80 million and nearly $100 million.

B.C. Hydro is the first applicant to present its plan and cross-examination of its witnesses has taken up most of the four days of hearings so far.

Williams' attack on Hydro's cost figure came after lawyers for other companies claimed the authority had underestimated its figures by the way it had allocated costs for the Vancouver Island system on a Lower Mainland section of the route which also serves the Vancouver area.

McPherson said many questions raised by Williams on what should be included in the authority's costs should be referred to a financial witness and he declined to answer himself.

The indirect costs included by Williams included prehearing expenses for project feasibility studies; engineering; legal expenses; interest during construction, and the cost of raising money.

McPherson told B. V. Massie, acting for Malaspina, that Hydro made a "very preliminary" feasibility study of building a pipeline to Vancouver Island in 1969.

He said a study last summer for the provincial government indicated the line would be economically viable.

River Plan Unveiled

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Fraser River Harbor Commission Thursday released long-range proposals for development of the main Fraser River channel from the river mouth to Pitt Lake and Kanaka Creek.

The proposals, in a development study by community and regional planner Norman Pearson, are for a wide variety of uses for the area, from deep-sea port to agriculture and recreation.

The study recommends that all islands in the channel, with the exception of Annacis Island, be left in their natural state or developed for agriculture. Annacis Island would be developed for use as a port and for industry.

Airline Appeal

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta government is appealing the rejection by the air transport committee of an Alberta Airline's application for a run between Edmonton and Grande Prairie, says Industry Minister Fred Peacock.

Service on the route has been awarded to Thunderbird Airlines of Prince George.

Ultra-Jumbo Jet Seen as Arctic Solution

CALGARY (CP) — Plane with a wingspan of almost 500 feet and powered by 12 jet engines, such as power the 747 Jumbo jet, may be a feasible alternative means of carrying natural resources such as oil, gas and minerals out of the Arctic, a Boeing Co. official said Thursday.

Preliminary figures "are attractive enough to warrant an in-depth study" of using such an aircraft, Marvin Taylor, a product development supervisor for Boeing, told the Petroleum Society at its annual meeting.

There are "eager" markets for the petroleum resources of the Far North, Taylor said, but the hostilities of nature and terrain, plus environmental factors, pose problems for pipelines and surface shipping.

Initial studies have conceived of an aircraft that could carry about 2.3 million pounds of cargo in two removable wing pods, he said.

The cargo pods, one on each wing, would be 150 feet long and 26 feet in diameter. The total payload would be 10 times that of the largest existing cargo plane, he said.

Some enchanted evening...

You relax after a superb dinner in the warm, scented evening among flowers and watch fish gently feeding in the rock pools.

Queen Sees Ailing Uncle

PARIS — Queen Elizabeth spent 40 minutes Thursday with the Duke of Windsor in what may prove to be her last meeting with her ailing self-exiled uncle.

The 76-year-old Duke, who has undergone extensive cobalt treatment, was too ill to stand and welcome the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh and Prince Charles.

Instead, it was the Duchess of Windsor, the U.S. born twice-divorced former Wally Simpson for whom then King Edward VIII abdicated in 1936, who met the visitors. The Duke's ill health beclouded a meeting that marked the first time that the Duchess has played hostess to the Queen whose father, the late George VI, succeeded him on the throne. By implication the visit amounted to the Royal family's final acceptance of the Duchess who has never been allowed her private wish: To call herself "Her Royal Highness."

The Queen did not see her aunt for almost 30 years, until a public reconciliation took place in 1967 when the Royal family invited the Windsors to participate in an official ceremony in London honoring Queen Mary, the Duke's mother.

ANCHORAGE — Marine explorer Jacques Costeau stopped briefly in Anchorage this week with raw film and walrus pups, and said the walrus is in no danger from Eskimo hunting.

The explorer, his son Philipe and a film crew had spent four days on St. Lawrence Island filming a television documentary on Eskimo walrus hunts.

The Eskimos of Gambell are exploiting every ounce of the walrus," he said. "They use the skin to make their boats, the fat for cooking, the meat for themselves and their dogs. Everything is used."

The program, he said, is scheduled for airing next year, along with other documentaries on humpback whales, poisonous sea serpents and hippapotamuses.

It was the 10th successive time, Mrs. McLaren, a great grandmother, celebrated her birthday crossing the Atlantic.

Mrs. McLaren, who lived in Canada for 54 years before returning to Britain this year, will spend three months in Toronto with her daughter.

COPENHAGEN — A man facing arson and fraud charges walked out of jail on the strength of a release order distinguished by grammatical errors and more than 20 spelling mistakes. He wrote it himself.

Hansen, charged with tax insurance frauds totalling $380,000, began with a sheet of paper on which he persuaded someone at police headquarters here to put an official stamp.

He took a prison typewriter to his cell to compose the order setting him free. And signed it in the name of the state prosecutor.

When Hansen was transferred to a provincial jail he asked his police escort to give the letter to the governor. Next morning he was told he was free.

SECHELT — Funeral services will be held tomorrow for A. L. McLellan, better known as the father of British Columbia medical insurance, who died at his home here 60 miles northwest of Vancouver at the age of 71.

Nicknamed Mr. MSA, Mr. McLellan outlined in 1937 to the B.C. Medical Association his plan for a private medical care scheme based on co-operation among employers, employees and the medical profession.

His plan was launched in 1940 under the name of Medical Services Association and during the next 25 years, Mr. McLellan served as director and secretary-treasurer of his brainchild.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth, and a son, Vernon.

GLASS OF WATER WITH MURKY PAST

TORONTO (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Rod Basford raised the glass to his lips, sipped and pronounced the water tasteless. Hours before, it had been raw sewage.

He was testing the result of a $400,000 research project aimed at producing pollution-free, safe water from recycled sewer water.

The project was paid for by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and carried out by the Ontario Research Foundation.

Six researchers spent 2½ years on the project, finally evolving a system that can convert sewer water to safe drinking water in half an hour.

Dr. Gerald Zarnett, project engineer, said the system could be used now except for one thing:

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

WINDSOR

MOMENT OF GRIEF MADE HER FAMOUS

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mary Vecchio was always big for her age. A runaway at 14, the dark-haired girl from the Miami suburb of Opa Locka easily passed as an 18-year-old.

"School was awful and I was fed up. I decided to run. I got to Atlanta and then hitch-hiked north . . . not caring where I ended up. Somebody gave me a ride to Ohio."

That was 1970. A few days after reaching Ohio, she found herself marching with new-found pals in anti-war demonstrations at Kent State University.

The tense scene erupted into a campus fight between demonstrators and the National Guard. Shots rang out and victims began falling. One was Jeffrey Glenn Miller, a boy Mary had just met.

"Nobody would help him," she recalled. "He was lying there, bleeding. I screamed. It was horrible. I began crying because I knew he was dead."

BACK HOME NOW

Mary Vecchio now is 16, still large for her years, and back at home in Opa Locka with her parents. Mary tried school for a while but quit in the 10th grade.

A cardboard box in Claire Vecchio's bedroom holds clippings from her daughter's past two years. Dozens of letters are there, much of it hate mail to the girl who became a symbol of the radical movement.

"I'm still on probation as a runaway," Mary says. "It runs out Aug. 31 and maybe I'll go away again. I'm not happy. I don't like Opa Locka any more. People have been nasty to me here."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Three men pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to impersonating police officers by flagging down drivers with the help of a rotating red light mounted on the dashboard of their car.

Gerald Earl McDormand, 20, of 3420 Woodburn, was fined $250 on each of two counts in the charge, and was given a suspended sentence of six months and prohibited from driving during that period.

Co-accused Scott Fellner, 18, of 1057 Moss, and Lawrence Robert Green, 19, 516 Dumersq, were remended to June 1 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

Court was told the trip stopped three cars they considered to be speeding April 15, asking for the motorists' driving licences. One driver asked to see the men's police badges and was not detained further.

McDormand had a record dating from 1970 which included convictions for drinking, fighting, vagrancy and breaking and entering with intent to steal.

Judge Willaim Ostler told the accused it was the "utmost importance that we maintain public respect for — and confidence in — policemen."

To describe the vigilante-type activity as "fun" or "an alternative to sitting in a beer parlor" showed "a marked lack of responsibility," the judge said.

A laborer was fined a total of $375 for fraudulently obtaining unemployment insurance benefits two years ago.

Eleanor Kathryn Brown, 48, of 4225 Quadra, was fined $400 and banned from driving four months except for work purposes for driving while impaired April 16 on Interurban and Grange.

Her car was involved in an accident in which damage totalled $3,000 and two persons were injured, police said.

Douglas Guy Ritchie, 21, of 2093 Qu'Appelle, was fined $450 and given a six-month partial ban for impaired driving April 14 on Qu'Appelle.

George Orest Kaminsky, 21, of 6292 Winch, was given a $400 fine and partial four-month prohibition for impaired and erratic driving on Admirals Road early Thursday morning.

William Robert Skibo, 22, of 1050 Queens, was fined $400 and given a four-month partial ban for impaired driving May 18 on Oak Bay Avenue.

Planned Wife's Rape-Murder

WASHINGTON (WP) — Robert Ammidown, his voice choking with emotion, Thursday admitted publicly for the first time that he planned every detail of his wife's rape and murder last Oct. 1 under the East Capitol Street bridge here.

Testifying as the key government witness at the first-degree murder trial of Richard A. (Tony) Lee and Lee's brother, Ralph, Ammidown declared in a quavering voice, "I am going to cleanse myself so I can live with myself. I'm sorry, Tony, I'm going to tell the truth."

"Somewhere along the line, I lost my soul," Ammidown, 50, told the jury of nine women and three men, and then broke down in sobs.

At his own murder trial in late March, Ammidown had insisted that he intended only to have his wife abducted and raped for the purpose of scaring her into giving him some money so that the Lee brothers could open a gambling and prostitution club in southern Maryland.

As the Lee brothers glared at him from the defence table, Ammidown described in detail what he called a carefully formulated plan for Tony Lee to rape Mrs. Amiddown and then shoot her with a .25-calibre pistol.

The morning of the killing, Ammidown said, he telephoned Lee and said, "It's on, Tony. I'll see you tonight."

That evening, Amiddown said, he and his wife, Linda, 47, sat in the Flagship Restaurant in southwest Washington less than an hour before her death and quarrelled one last time.

While they were waiting for cocktails. Amiddown testified, "I took Linda's hand and said let's have a nice evening." His wife pulled her hand away and complained that she would rather be attending an antique show that was being held that evening near their home in Arlington, Va., he said.

When the cocktails were served, Amiddown testified, "I raised my glass and said, 'Cheers, Linda. I love you'." At that point, Ammidown said, his wife "wouldn't clink it (the glass)."

Amiddown testified that by prearrangement, Tony Lee was waiting two blocks away for the couple to leave the restaurant so that he could abduct them.

After the abduction, Amiddown said, Lee forced them to drive to the East Capitol Street bridge, tying Mrs. Amiddown's hands behind her back on the way.

Once at the site, Amiddown said Lee took Mrs. Amidown to a spot near the water's edge, returning once to warn Ammidown to stay in the car.

Shortly afterward, Amdown said, Lee returned to the car again, this time in an "excited" state, and told of the rape.

Moments later, according to Ammidown, he heard two shots and looked up in time to see Lee running away.

Ammidown said he ran to his wife and cradled her bloodied head in his arms. "I realized she was gone," Ammidown said of his wife, who had been shot twice in the head.

Throughout the testimony, the Lee brothers stared intently at Ammidown, occasionally shaking their heads slightly.

When asked by prosecutor James Sharp why he was admitting his role in the slaying, Ammidown said, "I have to . . . for the last seven months, I have had nothing to do but read and think."

"Somewhere along the line, I lost my soul, but I'm telling you, I've read that New Testament back and forth," Ammidon said in a choking voice.

Coast Pollution Tops Their List

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The need to preserve man's heritage before it's too late motivates the lives of Cleo and Alex Matheson.

Appalled at the coastal pollution they saw in Spain, where Alex worked until just recently as a geologist with a mining company, the Mathesons have returned to Canada where they hope to help stave off similar disaster.

And approval of the controversial trans-Alaska pipeline last week, which will lead to massive supertankers passing through the Strait of Juan de Fuca, only heightens their sense of emergency.

Mrs. Matheson has no illusions about the dangers facing our coastline and its wildlife.

She says oil pollution on Britain's beaches increased one third last year — not because of major oil spills, but as a result of normal bilge-flushing.

Matheson has turned his back on mining "because mining always takes away something and never gives back." He's now in business for himself as a recreation and environment consultant.

Matheson shows pictures of Spanish beaches with children playing on sand that's peppered with large globules of congealed oil.

Two High Priorities

This couple have founded the Wildlife Reserve of Western Canada (WRWC), which has two high priorities:

Mrs. Matheson explains: "We want to take a specific area, Port Renfrew to Swartz Bay, which will be the region worst hit, and do a weekly survey of beaches.

"We also want to make extensive surveys of bird life in the area."

Referring to the Arrow oil spill in Chedabucto Bay in February, 1970, Mrs. Matheson points out that the ministry of transport reported that, because no reliable information of normal bird mortality rates were available, it had been almost impossible to assess the true damage picture.

The WRWC also hopes to establish a centre where oiled birds can be treated, and correct treatment procedures taught.

Mrs. Matheson is a naturalist by profession, having worked in Stanley Park, Calgary and Brookfield Zoos.

She and her husband met in Africa, while she was collecting animals for the zoos.

Victorians will remember her better by her maiden name. She's the daughter of Miles and Beryl Smeeton, whose sailing exploits on the world's oceans, particularly around Cape Horn, are world-famous.

Now Run Game Farm

The former Salt Spring Island couple now run a game farm at Cochrane, Alberta, and part of the WRWC's program is to send species of wildlife now in danger of extinction to Cochrane where, hopefully, they will breed and prosper.

However, the threat of pollution to the west coast is the issue that most concerns the Mathesons now.

"People don't realize how serious the situation already is," says Mrs. Matheson.

She quotes a report of the United Nations' food and agricultural organization which lists the Strait of Georgia as one of the "most notoriously contaminated areas in the world."

"Just because you can't see the stuff from a ferry," she says, "you forget it's there."

Both she and her husband hope that Canada will follow Europe's example and set up watchdog committees, such as Britain's Advisory Committee on Oil Pollution of the Sea.

"Apart from their heritage," she warns, "people in this area also stand to lose their livelihood. This is a tourist area — and who wants beaches that you can't sit down on without getting a dirty bottom?"

Storybook's Villain— Supermarket

VANCOUVER (CP) — Housewives who complain of erratic pricing by supermarkets should show their husbands The Grocery Store Storybook when asking for a bigger grocery allowance.

The 23-page booklet states bluntly that the shopper is being had by supermarket chains which are masters of the illusionary pricing technique and often control a product from farm to store shelf.

The booklet resulted from a discussion between Gary Rush, an associate professor of sociology at Simon Fraser University, and his students, who decided to do a field study on food marketing.

The introduction says the stores "have become masters in the art of illusion," using everything from an artificial "homey" atmosphere to the strategic placing of goods on shelves and a price structure which is "professionally hidden in a facade of competitive pricing."

"The major food chains cover up the real nature of their operations through fanfare marketing aimed at brainwashing the consumer into believing that products are priced competitively," it says.

Intimidated

"With the market controlled by a few major chains, the few independent chains in the market are so intimidated it is in nobody's interest to risk profits at the uncertain expense of real competition."

The students drew these conclusions after a month-long study of the pricing structures of three major supermarket chains in five areas of Greater Vancouver.

A list of identical items was used to compare prices in the stores at about the same time each week. Wherever possible, a department store or discount store was included for comparison.

Meat Worst

The students found the most blantant examples of price inequities existed in the selling of meat. For example, the weekly cost of meat from an independent meat market in outlying Surry was $9.93, compared with $13.09 for the same amount of meat at a major chain store in the Vancouver district of Grandview.

The study indicates that the major chains do not have the same prices in any given area but that this does not necessarily reflect competitive factors, since very little price adjustment within a single store was discovered

The students concluded that once each store's share of the market is established, there is no percentage in cutting prices in an attempt to gain more customers.

In the case of price differences between stores of the same chain, the study found variations of as high as eight per cent for groceries and 15 per cent for meat with low-income areas apparently paying the highest prices.

Summer Plan 'Must' for Autistic Children

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Autistic children in a special class at Sir James Douglas School will be offered a summer recreational program again this year.

The Victoria Society for Autistic Children is hiring three university students to run a summer program during July and August at St. Anne's Academy. The eight children in the special class, and possibly other children, may be included.

These children would regress if they were away from school for two months, said Dr. Larry Axmaker, psychologist with the Greater Victoria School Board. They would revert to infantile behavior and forget the behaviors they had learned at school, he said.

Summer Money Needed

Signs of regression can be seen even after Christmas and Easter vacations, he added.

The Society for Autistic Children is depending on its annual tag day, June 9, to raise enough money to finance the summer program.

The three psychology students — Bernice McGowan, Bill Colston and Paul Solansen — had intended to run the program with an Opportunities for Youth grant. Their grant application was refused, so the society must raise the money itself if the project is to go ahead.

Jack Sullivan, tag day chairman, is looking for volunteers. The society is small, about 25 members, many of them parents of autistic children.

Autistic children are neither psychotic nor retarded, but completely withdrawn, having little or no communication or interaction with other people, said Axmaker.

Each is on a different program, said Axmaker, who supervises the class and visits it once a week. Some study school subjects, like arithmetic, and will be entering a normal class next fall; some are learning to use zippers or tie their shoes; some are simply learning to get along with other people.

Mrs. Dawn Hodgson has been the class teacher for the past two years, with the help of volunteers. The summer program won't be as structured as the winter classes, she said, but it will bring the children together regularly.

"Last summer she ran (the program) herself," Sullivan said of Mrs. Hodgson. "She hasn't had a break from these children."

The Society for Autistic Children opened its first special class three years ago in the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children. Last fall the class came under the Greater Victoria School Board and was moved to Sir James Douglas School.

Logical Starting Age

Pre-school is the logical age to give special help to autistic children, said Mrs. Beverley Cawsey, the society's secretary. Then the children could start public school at the normal age.

"It's the lack of pre-school children that's holding us back," said Mrs. Cawsey. The society could probably find the money and room, she said, but it doesn't know enough pre-school autistic children to warrant a class.

"Our plan for the future is to have a home specially for these children," said Sullivan.

Taking care of an autistic child is a 24-hour a day job, said Sullivan. Having a home for them would relieve the emotional strain put on families, he explained.

It's True: You Do Gain Weight After Quitting

NEW YORK (UPI) — The common notion that people who give up cigarettes are likely to gain weight has been elevated from folklore to statistical fact.

Drs. George W. Comstock and Richard W. Stone did it by comparing the medical measurements of 501 men who were checked over twice, five to six years apart. They calculated the risk to be 40 per cent.

Being statistical their study could provide no answer to the prime question of how cigarette smoking could interfere with the accumulation of body fat and thus keep smokers thinner than they would be if they didn't smoke.

However, six of seven ex-smokers recently revealed a diminished basal oxygen consumption to investigating scientists. This, said Comstock and Stone, could cause weight gain even in the absence of an increase in food intake or a decrease in exercise.

Theory Ignored

Their study did not deal with the psychological theory that some ex-smokers compensate by eating more or exercising less or both. Either is a sure way of getting fat (or fatter).

Comstock is an epidemiologist at the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, and Stone is in the medical department of the American Telephone Company. Their hope was to turn up reassuring statistics for smokers who tell their doctors they don't stop because they're afraid of getting fat.

Instead they raised a new question which, in their words, is: "Do the hazards of obesity outweigh the benefits of becoming an ex-smoker?" These hazards don't, they said in a report to the American Medical Association.

Tests Repeated

The 501 men were technical telephone workers. They were between 40 and 59 years old when checked over the first time.

Five or six years later these routine examinations were repeated. They revealed a general trend toward weight gain. But the gains were the most among the men who had stopped smoking cigarettes between examinations.

The more cigarettes they had smoked before giving up the habit, the more weight they gained. For example, 17 men who had smoked 25 or more daily gained an average of 15 pounds. The gains could be measured in thickened fat folds.

PUB THERAPY WORKS

TORONTO (CP) — A pub setting in all institutions for the aged is suggested by a Nova Scotia psychiatrist, Dr. Mary MacDonald.

Pub sociotherapy she calls it in the current issue of the Canadian Nurse.

She reports old people who can go in a small group at a set time daily for a drink in a pub find more interest in living.

"Old jokes, old songs and social graces are rembered," she writes. Each patient is allowed one pint of beer or two ounces of wine.

The pub idea was started in the Provincial Psychiatric Hospital in Dartmouth, N.S. a year ago last fall.

A portable bar was built. A free, special liquor licence was obtained so beer could be bought at a 10-per-cent discount.

The pub, open Monday to Friday from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m., became so popular that a year later — last fall — it was moved to larger quarters.

"Wits are sharpened and depressions lifted," says Dr. MacDonald in charge of the Nova Scotia Hospital's geriatric unit at Dartmouth. "A group spirit emerges."

The patients, families and staff were all more interested than had been expected.

"Controlled pub sociotherapy is recommended, with no reservations, for all institutions for the aged."

At least two nurses are present to help get people talking. One woman who had to be fed by two nurses for six months, drank wine by herself in her first voluntary feeding.

Another woman with a stroke had given up and would not co-operate when being turned over, although she could move all her limbs.

"The very first thing she did for herself was to lift her wine glass."

Aborigines Knew About 'Birth Pills'

ATLANTA (UPI) — The oral contraceptives in use today have a kinship, historically speaking, with a birth control method followed by Australian aborigines possibly as long as 5,000 years ago.

Dr. Edwin Dale, a researcher in the department of gynecology-obstetrics, Emory University School of Medicine, revealed this little known medical sidelight in a paper presented here at a south family planning conference. The paper outlined briefly the origins of progesterone, a hormone now widely used in the manufacture of oral contraceptives.

"Historically speaking, the continuous administration of small amounts of progesterone over prolonged periods of time for contraceptive effects may have had its origin with the Australian aborigines 5,000 years ago," Dale said.

Ate Sweet Yam

Quoting medical historians, Dale said it was a "well established procedure that young girls not wishing to become pregnant should consume a rich diet in the local sweet potato plant (yam) and that adherence to this diet would give the desired results."

Dale said another researcher, Russell Marker in 1938 described the synthesis of progesterone from basic steroid starting material isolated from the Mexican yam, dioscorea.

"The major steroidal compound in this yam," Dale said, "is a progestin-like substance and we may presume that in the Australian girls a similar compound exerted some type of contraceptive effect."

Before discovery of the progesterone hormone in yams, one ounce of the material cost $2,000 Dale said. But in the 1930s, Marker, a steroid chemist at Penn State university, sought a cheap and abundant source of the hormone.

Quit His Job

Marker quit his job at the university, rented a small laboratory in Mexico City and went to work, using the yam dioscorea and the cabeza denergro, a vine growing wild in the jungles of Vera Cruz.

One day in 1943, Marker showed up at a Mexican company, Laboratories Hormona. He brought along two jars wrapped in newspapers, containing about 4½ pounds of progesterone, worth $160,000.

He formed a company which produced several more pounds of progesterone, enough to have a sizable impact on the world market.

First Success

A combination of progestin, a derivative of progesterone, and estrogen eventually became the first successful oral contraceptive, enovid-10, which was introduced in 1961.

Dale added later that he would not encourage women to eat sweet potatoes in lieu of taking proper oral contraceptives.

Although the yam has progesterone in it, he said the use made of the yam as a possible oral contraceptive by the Australian aborigine "was just an interesting historical sidelight, not born out by scientific investigation."

She gains their trust, then rewards for performance

'Rat-Race' Her Training Ground

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

USES LOVE, THICK GLOVES

Nobody loves a rat.

Not even, it seems, a lady who has been training them for four years now.

When a friend approached Mrs. Ina Spreitz in 1968 and asked her to train rats for his amusement park, Mrs. Spreitz reacted with understandable distaste.

But, the friend reasoned, you like animals. Rats are animals. Therefore . . .

Proved Too Much

The combination of devastating logic and the ties of friendship proved too much. Recently Mrs. Spreitz began what has become for her an annual event, teaching 12 laboratory rats the Hickory Dickory Dock routine.

This procedure involves the rat making a trip up a simulated clock face, reaching it as a pre-recorded nursery rhyme intones "the clock struck one" and then coming back down the clock, all in response to a buzzer.

For several years now, this particular attraction has been a big drawing card at the Wooded Wonderland, the summer amusement park for children off the Pat Bay Highway.

The first stage in rat training, says Mrs. Spreitz, is to cultivate their trust. If a rat becomes frightened, it will back into a corner, stand on its hind legs and its body will go rigid. Its final "defence" weapon is to utter a high-pitched scream, reckoned by many people to be one of the most spine-chilling sounds around. Rats also bite, so leather gloves are a must for their trainers.

Despite all this, Mrs. Spreitz has come to recognize that all rats have quite distinct personalities.

"They can't be pushed too hard. They must learn their routine themselves," she says.

If the rat race, so to speak, becomes too hectic, rats will simply cop out and refuse to perform. And no amount of anger or coaxing on the part of the trainer can make them budge. In fact, the rat will very quickly sense the trainer's mood, so calmness and patience are essentials for success.

There is also an ideal age for training rats. Mrs. Spreitz's charges are all under one year old. Any younger, the rat will simply play. Once past their first year, the rat's sex drive crowds out the desire to learn.

The actual training program consists of reinforcing the "perform and reward" technique. When the rat carries out a certain act, it is rewarded with food.

Mrs. Spreitz's object is to have the rat respond automatically to the sound of a buzzer, pressed by young visitors to the amusement park.

Short, Good Life

Mrs. Spreitz says that her role as trainer, far from being cruel, assures these rats at least one year of good food and healthy conditions. As the animals are bred in captivity under laboratory conditions, they have little resistance to germs or attack by other animals.

The alternative "professional" fate for such animals would be as experimental creatures for medical research.

Muddy Hubby Blues

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a fascination for mud! I think it's because when he was a little boy his mother never let him get dirty. He said she used to run after him with a damp wash cloth about 20 times a day to be sure his hands were clean.

Anyway, I didn't know anything about the way he liked to play in the mud until after I married him. He sometimes goes in the back yard and turns on the garden hose to make a lot of mud, then he gets right down in it and rolls around in it until he's covered with mud from head to toe.

How can I break him of this weird habit? Otherwise, he is perfectly normal.—Bewildered.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Why should you? It's harmless. Your mudder is finally getting back at mother.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22, and old enough to know my own mind, but my mother is driving me crazy. I went with a guy named Allen for two years, but it just didn't work out between us. He was a nice kid, but he just wasn't for me.

My mother always liked Allen, and she compares every boy I've gone with since him.

Right now I am practically engaged to Gerry, and my mother still asks me why I stopped going with a nice boy like Allen. She keeps saying things like, "Why don't you ask Allen over sometime, maybe you two can pick up where you left off."

Oh, brother!— Up a Wall.

DEAR UP: Your mother still obviously has a soft spot in her heart for Allen. In time she will get over him, just as you have. Be patient.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old male, and I am going bald fast; there is hair on my pillow, hair all over the floor, and every time I wash my hair or comb or brush it, it comes out in gobs.

My father went bald at a very early age so I am not surprised.

My problem is my parents. They say I am losing my hair because I wear it too long. They insist that it's falling out because it is heavy and it's being pulled down by its own weight, and if I cut it short (crew cut) it wouldn't fall out. This sounds idiotic to me. I figure it's just hereditary. May parents won't believe me, but they'll believe you. What's the answer, Abby?—Going Bald.

DEAR GOING: You're right. It is hereditary. You won't have it longer, if you wear it shorter.

Rodents 'Example' To Man

TORONTO (CP) — If human beings follow the example of some rats and mice, their life spans could be increased 10 to 20 per cent, a British biochemist said here recently.

Dr. Alex Comfort, who also is a doctor poet, novelist and director of gerontological research at the University of London, predicted experiments in biological interference with the rates of aging in man will begin within a decade.

If techniques used with rodents were successful with humans, the effect would be that a man of age 80 would have experienced aging changes typical in a man of 70.

Rats live up to 20 per cent longer if their total calorie intake is cut throughout life to 60 per cent of normal. Certain synthetic anti-oxidants used as food additives to prevent cooking oils from turning rancid also retard aging. Experiments are being conducted with other drugs and chemicals.

A method of short-term measurement of the rate of aging must be found before experiments can be conducted on humans, said Dr. Comfort. Otherwise, doctors would have to wait 80 years to see if their experiments were successful.

Youngest Pacemaker?

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A miniaturized heart pacemaker has been implanted in a two-months-old baby here, believed to be the youngest recipient of the device.

The operation, doctors said, has enabled the once-failing heart of Nicole Kruljac to beat strongly.

Nicole was near death at Children's Hospital Medical Centre April 30 due to an abnormally slow heartbeat. Doctors installed a temporary pacemaker in her heart and the permanent model was implanted in an operation May 4.

The pacemaker sends electric impulses to the heart muscle, causing it to beat at a proper rate.

Holiday Weekend Marks Respect for Queen, Era

elizabeth forbes

If you own a calendar that lists such things as holidays and commemorative dates, you no doubt have observed that today is recorded as Citizenship Day and next Monday is named Commonwealth and Victoria Day.

Then, if you have an inquiring mind, you begin to wonder why and how these particular days received such names.

Actually it all started back in 1845, when the governments of Upper and Lower Canada declared May 24, Queen Victoria's birth date, a holiday.

Since then, a special day in memory of that monarch has been observed annually in Canada.

Over the years, Canadians have considered that this observance not only honored a respected monarch; it pointed to the amazing era in which she lived, the one that historians have named the Victorian Age.

It was a time of achievement in trade, commerce, science, art, invention and exploration.

It was also time that saw development of the automobile, sewing machine, phonograph, telephone, rotary printing press, electric light, telegraphy, photography, steamships and the modern railroad.

Empire Greatest

The Atlantic cable was laid, the Suez Canal built, the Northwest Passage discovered, Africa explored and the British Empire reached its height.

Pride in such accomplishments and the linking of empire affairs with the Queen's birthday, found their way into school life in 1898 when the Dominion Education Association (later the Canadian Education Association) proposed celebration of an Empire Day in Canadian schools.

The proposal was accepted and on May 23, 1899, the first Empire Day was observed in the classrooms.

From then on there were two special days, one a school day and one a statutory holiday.

Logical Step

Evolution from Empire to Commonwealth gradually altered the name of the school observance, but not the fact that Commonwealth Day was still the last school day before Victoria Day.

Another interesting development came in 1953 with the use of the word "citizenship" in connection with the observance of Commonwealth Day. This, of course, was a natural and logical step to remind us of the privileges and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship.

In that same year (1953) and in order to provide a long holiday weekend for Canadians, the federal government designated Victoria Day as the Monday "immediately preceding May 25".

At the same time, Citizenship Day was named as the Friday "immediately preceding Victoria Day." And somehow, the word "commonwealth" was transferred to the Monday, and joined with the word "Victoria."

Finally, on Jan. 31, 1957, the Canadian government added even greater significance to Commonwealth and Victoria Day, when this first Monday "immediately preceding May 25" was also fixed to celebrate in Canada the birthday of Queen Elizabeth II.

So it is that in 127 years, a relatively simple celebration has burgeoned into the observance of two very special days.

Through the two days we show pride, of course, in past glories of the British Empire, but even more pride in today's Commonwealth with its free partnership of nations.

These are nations whose people may differ in race, religion and tradition but who are earnestly attempting to solve their problems through tolerance and mutual understanding.

Queen's Words

In the words of Queen Elizabeth II, spoken a few years ago: "The Commonwealth bears no resemblance to empires of the past. It is an entirely new conception built in the highest qualities of the spirit of man — friendship, loyalty and the desire for freedom and peace."

Transplants Cure Deafness

CHICAGO (AP) – An ear specialist predicts that increased use of ear tissue transplants soon will mean restored hearing for hundreds of thousands of persons now afflicted with deafness.

Dr. Eugene L. Derlacki said in an interview several hundred such transplants are being performed successfully each year on persons suffering from certain types of deafness.

"Once the tissue becomes available, it will be used more and more," Dr. Derlacki said.

He forecast a growth in the number of banks storing the tiny bones, cartilage and other tissues used in such transplants to the point where individual surgeons would maintain small storehouses.

Dr. Derlacki, professor of otolarnygology at Northwestern University medical school, will head a middle-ear transplant and research program announced by the university.

The Eart Homograft and Temporal Bone Research Laboratory he heads will maintain the first ear tissue bank and transplant program in the midwestern U.S.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sat., May 20, 1972

By SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some travel plans are changed. Messages, reservations could go astray. Some persons now are careless in handling your affairs. It would be wise to double-check. Some statements, promises simply are not accurate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 21): Spend wisely. Means don't throw good money after bad. Emphasis now is on extremes. Emotional responses are intense. Affairs of heart dominate. Member of opposite sex is likely to play key role. Maintain semblance of objectivity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Extra responsibility is due, including overtime assignment. You may be charged with teaching others specific job, routine. In personal area, sparks fly at home base. Strive to be a peacemaker. Be neutral.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relatives get directions confused. Best now to be versatile, to have alternatives at hand. Confusion could be order of day. Check schedule. Someone may be making appointments for you. Make inquiries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Agreement can be reached with regard to lease, property, special purchase. Key is to state needs in frank manner. Member of opposite sex plays paramount role. Gemini is much in picture. Take initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work quietly. Avoid making claims, accusations. Maintain low profile. You don't have complete story. Know this and do some additional investigating. Taurus individual plays prominent role. Be persistent, yet diplomatic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21: Avoid deceiving yourself. What you wish and what actually is may now be two different things. Friend is confused, irritated and lacks sense of direction. This being so, rely on your own judgment. Seek facts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you press too hard, you lose control. Key is to stick with what you know. Capricorn is involved. You are repaid for past efforts. Business investments, emotional commitments are spotlighted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Involvement with Sagittarian is indicated. Finish rather than initiate project. What appeared settled may prove to be the opposite. Now is time to make waves. Don't let anyone try toplan your life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conflict exists between what is familiar and what you may desire. Specifically, you must decide between home and professional aspirations. Leo can aid in obtaining fresh outlook. Be receptive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Follow hunch. Family member sings blues. However, you do have life of your own to live. Know it and make others understand. Mate or partner is in picture. Out or tension can arise a new understanding.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, subject to moods, but creative and capable of overcoming odds. This year you get into business for yourself. You may marry, and you will find that September is your most important month of 1972.

MAN AWAITS NORMAL LIFE

COWICHAN STATION — Michael Hawkes, 47, is waiting for a pair of matched kidneys to come along so that he and his family can finally live a full and active life.

Hawkes, father of two teenage children, had kidney trouble since he moved to his small 11-acre farm in Cowichan Station 17 years ago. In February he had his diseased kidneys removed and he is now waiting for a transplant.

* * *

Hawkes is optimistic that within the nest year "I will get a transplant."

Until that time Hawkes as to make two trips a week to a Victoria hospital where for 12 hours his blood is cleaned through a kidney machine.

This means that his family is unable to go on holidays and that, as well as the weekly trips, Hawkes has to stay near his telephone in case a pair of matched kidneys are found for him.

Hawkes said he does not feel guilty waiting for someone to die so that he may have their kidneys because "people are being killed all of the time — these accidents are going to happen anyway."

He said that there are a young man and young woman, both of Victoria, also waiting for kidney transplants. "There are more than 20 people in that area who use the machine."

When Hawkes receives the call that kidneys have been found for him, he must reach the Vancouver General Hospital within six hours. Local pilots have offered to fly him over when the time comes.

Besides becoming tired more easily and having to having to watch his fluid intake, Hawkes said he feels pretty healthy.

* * *

He said he would be willing to do anything if he could get a part-time job "but what employer would have me when I have to be off for sure Wednesdays and Saturdays to go to Victoria to have my blood cleansed?"

"My family has been really great," he said. "But I would like to have my wife stop work and just be free for a while."

FOURTH SECTION

TRANSPORTATION HISTORY of the Yukon is depicted in an 80-foot mural on display at the provincial archives building for a month starting today. Capt. William Moore, a prominent Victoria citizen, was responsible for launching the railway through the White Pass in 1898. It was one of the most difficult railway projects ever engineered. There was no heavy construction equipment. Men with horses, shovels, picks, black powder, hacked their way through barriers of solid rock. In some instances mountain sides were so steep that determined railroad builders were suspended by ropes so they could carve the grade without hurtling off the sheer cliffs. The railroad was completed in 1900. The White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd. is sponsoring the display of the mural as part of Victorian Days. It will be mounted in the company's new railway depot at Skagway, Alaska. The mural, in four panels, was designed and painted by Charles Baker and Roy Minter. The mural represents 2,400 hours of work.

Branch Library Opening Delayed by Lockout

Opening of the largest branch library in the Capital Region is delayed until at least July, with finishing tradesmen locked out of the Seymour Ave. site in Saanich.

About one month's work remains to be done, following resumption of activity in the B.C. construction industry, whenever that occurs.

Greater Victoria librarian Donald Miller said the project was on schedule when the lockout took place, at which time a June 1 completion date was contemplated.

Opening ceremonies were scheduled for June 15 for what Miller called "the showpiece of the system."

Interior layout of the building, situated opposite the rear of Town and Country shopping centre, follows the open design of Esquimalt and Oak Bay branches but with much greater capacity — up to 60,000 volumes.

In addition, the Saanich branch is a multi-purpose library, having provision for special children's and adult's programs and serving as the area's bookmobile centre.

U.K. Troops Break Down Londonderry Barricades

BELFAST (CP) — British troops swept up to a guerrilla stronghold in Londonderry early today and smashed down barricades aimed at extending the frontiers of the bastion.

The army reported "minimal opposition" from either guerrillas or any of the 35,000 Roman Catholics living in "Free Derry."

The Irish Republican Army, during a day of fierce shoot-outs in Northern Ireland, thrust forward Thursday from its Bogside stronghold and erected street barricades within 20 yards of the city centre.

This extended Londonderry's "No-go" area — which troops and police don't enter and where the writ of British law does not run — by a quarter mile.

Eight 10-foot street joists were driven into the roadway across William Street, main entry to the stronghold. They were set in concrete while about 150 stone-throwing youths pelted soldiers firing back rubber anti-riot bullets.

A crane was commandeered to hoist the poles into position. A steel hawser was strung across the road and steel sheets swung into place.

"No-go" areas like "Free Derry" are a constant thorn in the flesh of Ulster's Protestant majority, who see them as a victory for IRA terrorism which is aimed at driving Northern Ireland under the rule of the mainly-Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

William Craig, leader of the militant Ulster Vanguard movement which claims the support of 100,000 diehard Protestants, said today, "It is difficult now to see how civil war can be avoided."

Security forces believe the IRA is on a campaign to provoke Protestant attacks on Catholics so it can leap to the defence of the minority and strengthen its power base.

A 15-year-old Protestant boy was shot to death and a woman and two teen-agers wounded Thursday in Belfast.

A police spokesman said the incident in which the boy was killed was "an outright murderous attack on innocent children."

EIGHT FROM ISLAND TO GET SFU DEGREES

Eight southern Vancouver Island residents were among a record 859 Simon Fraser University students qualified to receive degrees this year.

Nearly 4,000 students have earned Simon Fraser degrees since the university opened in 1965.

Emlen Trenchard Littell, 1215 Burnside Road West, Victoria, will recieve a master of science degree at the SFU convocation ceremony, May 27, in the university mall.

Bachelor of arts degree will be awarded to Lorna Erin Cue, 3699 Dallimore Road; and Grant Charles Dumbleton, 2275 Lansdowne Road, of Victoria; Jo-Anne Mary Stone and Mark Geoffery Stone, 3069 Gibbons Road, Duncan; and Robin William Nordman, RR 1, Ladysmith.

Cabbie Agrees To Stand Trial As 'Fake' Prof

BOSTON (UPI) — A 39-year-old Worcester taxi driver agreed in federal court today to surrender to Canadian authorities on charges of impersonating a psychologist.

Martin Bohn was accused of teaching at Brandon University in Manitoba, for a year while using the name and credentials of psychologist Martin Rudolph Bohn.

Bohn said he would surrender to Canadian officials by May 24.

CONSTRUCTION UP

Construction activity continues to rise in the unincorporated areas of southern Vancouver Island, including the Gulf Islands.

Building permits worth $1.4 million were issued by the Capital Regional District during April compared with $1.1 million in the same month last year.

Colwood ($571,844) and Langford ($543,360) accounted for most of the construction activity, followed by Outer Gulf Islands, $122,850; Sooke, $118,930; Salt Spring Island, $88,890; Metchosin, $48,348; and View Royal $750.

So far this year permits worth $4.8 million have been issued compared with $4.4 million in the first four months of last year. Of this, Colwood accounted for $1.7 million and Langford 1.6 million.

Judaism Embraced

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — A former Roman Catholic priest was converted back to Judaism Tuesday by a rabbinical court here. Reinhold Dorland, 60, a German-born Jew, fled to France in 1939 and became a Catholic. He was ordained after the war and served until recently in a Jerusalem Dominican monastery. Dorland, now a tourist guide, said he decided to return to Judaism after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Designers Develop Foliage Appreciation

The appreciation of plant foliage for its own sake has been greatly developed by designers of arrangements made of cut plant material. We see competitive classes each year in this type of arrangement at flower shows.

Perhaps the Japanese have been the masters of foliage design, for they carry the art from their homes into their gardens, using plants without flowers as focal points of interest.

Indeed the flowers of azaleas for instance are often removed in favor of creating a specially meaningful line with the shrub branches alone.

While the planting season is still with us, gardeners with gardens or designers in apartments with balconies should look around for shrubs having foliage or special interest.

With the discerning eyes of a design arranger, you will be looking not only at foliage color but at texture and shape.

You may want sharp, upthrusting lines of yucca leaves yet not be able to accommodate the villainously sharp plant as it grows large enough to provide you with leaves. Will you settle for the green, or grey green, of iris foliage? Or the stiffer leaves of Phormium tenax, the New Zealand-flax?

This makes a fine tub plant for a patio or balcony if reasonably free of hard frost in winter. In fact, I am inclined to believe the weight of snow on the leaves and too much water at the roots in winter are greater enemies to Phormium than moderate frosts.

Ordinary laurel leaves are excellent for design. In their different sizes they will fill many uses. One shrub of this plant will grow as a screen in the garden or may be easily controlled in size by pruning if wanted on a balcony.

For something of entirely different texture, take a design arranger's look at two members of the Viburnum family — V rhytidophyllum (deeply grooved leaves) and V. Davidii.

Their heavily veined texture will delight you. Both shrubs are easy to grow in shade or light shade, though V. rhytidophyllum takes a year or two to get its feet into new soil.

These are evergreen shrubs, with their leaves available in winter. As a bonus they each bear flat heads of chalky white flowers in early spring.

A bowl of the bright yellow and green foliage from Elaegnus pungens aurea (Variegated Russian-olive) is a decoration in itself, but rarely have I found it possible to incorporate with other plant material.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

During a recent tournament, the following conversation was overheard. One of the players was speaking to his partner:

"I really dislike playing in a team-of-four event. If I play badly, my three teammates are annoyed with me. But if I play badly in a pair event, only one player — my partner — is annoyed with me."

His partner replied: "Well, that's one way of looking at it. But there is another way. In a team game, when you play badly, think of the four opponents who are positively delighted with you."

In today's deal which came up in a team-of-four game, one player gave an excellent performance. In so doing, he made the four members of the opposing team unhappy. But what was more important, he made his three teammates very happy. Our hero was sitting in the East seat.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

After West's king of clubs had captured the opening lead, he laid down the spade-king, and followed up by playing the queen of spades. After a long hesitation, during which he analyzed the situation, East overtook his partner's queen with the ace, and returned his remaining spade. As is evident, West ruffed this for the setting trick.

East's reason for overtaking the queen with the ace, as he explained it, was the following. He reasoned that if West had possessed the K-Q-x or the K-Q-x-x of spades, at trick three he would have led a low spade, rather than the queen. Therefore, when West elected to lead the spade queen, he had either the doubleton K-Q or the tripleton K-Q-J.

If the latter combination existed, the nothing would be lost by overtaking the queen with the ace, and returning a spade to West's jack. But if West had the doubleton K-Q, then it was imperative to overtake the queen with the ace, and lead a third round of spades.

When the deal was replayed with East-West's teammates holding the North-South cards, the same four-heart contract was arrived at. The play was the same to the first two tricks, but at trick three East did not overtake the queen with his ace. South was now able to fulfill his contract by later discarding his three remaining spades on dummy's diamonds.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Joe had something. "You know Alan," he said. "Well, if you add his age to the square of Betty's age you get 171, the number of her house."

Susan smiled. "Quite a coincidence. Is that all?"

"Only part of it," the boy replied. "If you add Betty's age to the square of Alan's you get 741, and that's his number."

What were the two ages?

(Answer Tuesday)

Yesterday's answer: CHEERS was 127759.

Pacers Lead

It gave the Pacers a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven American Basketball Association championship playoff.

MOTHERS
Have you ever thought of joining the growing number of women doing valuable work as day-care mothers? Are you home all day? Does your house have a fenced play space so that small children can play safely? We are planning to increase the number of day care homes in the following areas: Vic West, James Bay, and close to Sangster School, Richmond School and Craigflower School. If you are interested in being involved through the summer or from September onwards, and would like some more information, please call The Day Care Section of Family and Children Service, at 382-5121.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Hodgkin's Disease

Hodgkin's disease is a sort of cancer of the lymph system, and is called a lymphoma or a lymphosarcoma, because it tends to attack and cause enlargement of the lymph nodes in the neck, the armpits, the groin, and other places inside the body.

The lymph system is the system by which fluid is drained from the tissues and returned to the blood stream. Often the spleen in the left upper quadrant of the abdomen enlarges. The spleen is involved in the removal and destruction of defective and worn-out red blood cells from the blood stream, and is sometimes called "the graveyard of red blood cells."

Common symptoms are loss of weight, anemia, and perhaps some fever and itching of the skin. The disease can attack young people, more often men than women. Because it can so easily sneak up slowly on the patient, the attending physician should have an enlarged lymph node cut out and examined by an expert. Oftentimes, only by doing that, will the patient be treated early enough so that he will stay well.

The cause of the disease may be a virus. In some patients, the disease advances fairly rapidly, while in others it advances slowly. I remember a man who came to me with a Hodgkin's disease that had been dormant for 10 years.

Usually the result of treatment of Hodgkin's disease that has just appeared is good, while the result of treatment of Hodgkin's disease that has come back is not so good. I send my patients to a surgeon first, to see if he thinks he should remove an enlarged gland. Sometimes the surgeon will prefer to have the patient treated with very powerful X-rays or cobalt rays rather than with surgical removal of a cancerous lymph gland. There are several powerful drugs that are sometimes used, but they can bring some unpleasant side effects.

The earlier Hodgkin's disease can be detected and treated, the better the person's chances of getting well.

THOUGHTS OF SUICIDE IN COLLEGE STUDENTS

A while ago, Dr. Lief J. Braaten, of Cornell University in Ithaca, wrote of his studies of the tendencies of college students to think of suicide. As Dr. Braaten said, the suicidal student is often an angry, abnormally dependent and very unhappy person. "His anger often assumes the proportions of rage or intense hostility." He may act violently in order to get his own way.

He is often very competitive and ambitious; his dependence upon others often becomes almost unbearable during crises in love attachments or impeding academic failure. His idea often is to leave a note saying, "Now that I have killed myself, you'll be sorry."

At times these students are very restless and somewhat confused; sometimes they drop out of school and wander about the country aimlessly. Both boys and girls have fears about their masculinity or femininity, and sometimes these inner conflicts interfere greatly with their studying.

VAN ISLE MARINA

BOATING SEASON IS HERE

Your chance to make really good buys on used cruisers. One 23' Brandimayr, one 24' Brandimayr, one 21' Brandimayr, one 26' Brandimayr, one 26' Monk. All these boats are at our Marina, and all in the area of $6,000, or less. Now is the time to act. Come on out and we will be glad to help you.

Also two fine displacement cruisers that will give you many happy cruising hours.

One of the cleanest and best fiberform we have seen, just back in the water, bottom painted, all new condition, sleeps 5, head, stove, ice box, sink, life jackets, flares, compass, boat hardly used. Come and make offer now.

This is only a few of our wide selection of used boats. If you want to buy or sell let us do the work. Come out and see STEVE WURSTER and JACK FALKINS for assistance.

Bennett Scoffs at 'Socreds-Slipping' Survey

"That's wonderful," Premier Bennett said this morning of a newly-released survey indicating Social Credit popularity has declined to the point where an election now might result in a minority government.

"At least we're going to be elected again," he quipped.

The survey, in a copyrighted story in the Vancouver Province today, suggested that the official opposition New Democratic Party would only be a handful of seats behind in a post-election legislature — the closest that party has come to power since 1952, when it was within one seat of the Socreds.

"That's pretty good from the Vancouver Province," the premier said. "Remember the last election — every election . . . they're always hinting Social Credit is going to lose."

The premier puts little stock in computer polls. "My people poll shows we will win with a fair majority," he said.

Wait for the election, he warned.

This year?

The Province poll was compiled from computer-analysed voter opinion samples from all areas of the province. Fifty interviews were conducted in each of British Columbia's 55 constituencies.

On that basis, an immediate election would result in the following seat distribution, with the present number held by each party in brackets following:

An important part of the poll was the undecided vote indicated — 24 per cent, which suggests the nature of the campaigns in the next election will be critical to its outcome and that all parties will be concentrating on the undecided votes.

The Province survey indicates that Social Credit, now in its 20th consecutive year of government, is losing strength to the Tories. Curiously, however, it also shows that while the Tories are regaining strength by stealing Socred votes, they may not be able to even hold the two seats they have at present.

Conservative representation in the Legislature at present is not elected, but came as a result of two Socred defections.

The Tory part of the picture in the next election, according to the province, will be a very small one, however. The only real gainers will be the New Democratic Party. And the Liberals will be holding the balance of power.

The Province says two ridings may be tied — Cariboo and the Kamloops constituency of Rehabilitation Minister P.A. Gaglardi, with the Socreds and NDP matching vote for vote.

The computers have given the poll a certain degree of flexibility. With other factors introduced, it says, the Socred seat total could go as high as 28, a bare majority, with the NDP dropping to 21.

Ottawa Sets 3-Point Plan for B.C. Ships

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The federal transport ministry is launching a three-stage program which ultimately will control marine traffic on the British Columbia coast.

The first phase begins July 1 and covers waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland from Cape Flattery at the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait to Cape Mudge near Campbell River, HO. HO. Buchanan, the ministry's regional director of marine services, said from Vancouver today.

Ships of 100 tons or more and towboats where vessel and tow extend 100 feet or more are being asked to take part on a voluntary basis initially.

Phase 2, expected to follow in about a year, will make participation compulsory.

The first two phases will be essentially a co-operative marine navigation information service, with ships in the waters covered reporting at each of 14 established locations.

Vessels will radio name, location, course, type of tow and anticipated arrival at the next checkpoint on a VHF radio channel, to be monitored by other marine traffic and the transport ministry from its station at Vancouver airport.

Buchanan said introduction of Phase 2 will depend on availability of receiving and transmitting equipment because vessels in addition to monitoring other traffic will be able to ask a shore station for information.

Phase 3, for which there is no target date, envisages complete radar monitoring and track plotting of shipping along as much of the B.C. coast as proves necessary.

Buchanan is the federal officer responsible for co-or-

CALGARY GIRL BITTEN BY WOLF

Anita Bartlett suffered injuries to the head and upper part of her body and was in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Police who cornered the animal after a 30-minute chase and killed it with a shotgun said they believed it had been partly domesticated.

A department of agriculture veterinarian positively identified the animal as a wolf and neighborhood residents said it had been seen in the southwest part of the city for two weeks.

Tests were being conducted to determine if it was rabid.

N. Viets Decimated At Kontum

SAIGON (CP) — North Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam's central highlands attacked the outer defences of Kontum today, but anti-personnel mines and U.S. bombers and helicopter gunships drove them back in disarray, field reports said.

The 2,000 troops drove to within two miles of the provincial capital, and at times the fighting was hand-to-hand. But it appeared to be a probe or show of strength, rather than an assault to capture the city.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 92 of the attackers killed, many of them by the U.S. F-4 Phantoms and B-52 bombers that supported the defenders.

They said three Saigon troops were killed and seven were wounded, but the casualties were believed to be higher.

Field reports said the advancing troops detonated the anti-personnel mines guarding the perimeter, and the steel fragments thrown out by the mines "decimated" them.

NO SUMMER VOTE—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today there will be no federal election this summer.

At a special lunch-time news conference, the prime minister put down speculation that he intended to dissolve Parliament and call a general election, possibly in July.

Trudeau said Canadians could look forward to "a prosperous, sunny, election-free summer."

Trudeau's announcement to a crowded, jostling corridor press conference ended frantic speculation that had built up over a July 17 election.

And he ruled out an August election at the same time. "There will not be a summer election — but it might be anytime after summer and up to the middle of 1973."

"I hope now you will relax," he told reporters.

A few moments earlier, the prime minister met his party caucus and made the same announcement there.

He told reporters that he has been saying for months that election machinery should be cooled.

Pension Bills Clear Senate

OTTAWA (CP) The government's two pension bills ended their speedy passage through the Senate today and were to receive royal assent formally making them law — at 12:30 p.m. PDT.

The Conservative opposition allowed rules of the Senate to be waived to permit third and final reading of bills to increase old age pensions and veterans allowances retroactive to January.

The two bills only reached the Senate Thursday afternoon.

Putting the bills into law means that about 805,000 Canadians receiving the basic old-age security pension of $80 a month get an increase of $2.88 retroactive to January, providing a back-pay sum of $17.28 each next month on top of the normal $80 in June.

Union Chiefs Stay in Jail Until Tuesday

QUEBEC (CP) — Three imprisoned Quebec labor leaders will not be freed before next Tuesday from Orsainville jail here, despite requests for day parole, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said today.

Choquette's statement in the Quebec national assembly may indicate no bargaining on new public service contracts can begin before next week, since unions have demanded the presence of their imprisoned leaders at the bargaining table.

Legal technicalities were being worked out after receipt Thursday by the justice department of requests from the three that they receive "day parole to enable them to join the bargaining. They would return to prison at night.

Premier Robert Bourassa said early today, after a two-hour Liberal caucus meeting that ended in the early-morning hours, that dealing with the requests was "essentially a judicial question."

Choquette had said earlier: "Each case will be studied before they are released.

ACT ALLOWS RELEASE

The requests were made under the Probation and Detention Establishments Act, which permits release of prisoners for short periods of time.

A union common front protesting the jailings said Wednesday it was up to the government to assure attendance of the leaders at negotiation sessions.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette and Solicitor-General Roy Fournier confirmed late Thursday that the justice department had recieved requests from Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau for their temporary release.

Drug Cost Cut Ordered in B.C.

New regulations under the Pharmacy Act passed Thursday allow pharmacists in certain cases to dispense cheaper, generic drugs rather than brand-name products.

In a prepared statement Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said in the future a pharmaceutical chemist will be able to dispense a brand other than that indicated by the prescribing doctor as long as the doctor does not stipulate otherwise.

However, if a doctor stipulates "no substitute" on the prescription the pharmacist must dispense the brand name indicated.

Loffmark said that in the past the pharmacists had to dispense whatever drug the doctor suggested but under the new regulations will be able to exercise product selection.

CHEAPER DRUGS

"They're authorizing the pharmacists to substitute a cheaper drug for an expensive one of the same quality," he said.

The minister said that because of extensive advertising some trade name drugs have been selling for $10 to $14 per 100 units whereas the same quality generic drug would sell for only $2.49 per 100 units.

Therefore, he said, the new regulations in such cases will provide a saving of about $10 per prescription.

"It will thoroughly discourage high-cost drugs where the high cost is based on nothing but promotion," Loffmark said.

The new regulations also state that all prescriptions must be labelled with the brand or proper name, strength and quantity of the preparation unless otherwise specified by the doctor.

Loffmark said this regulation will allow the buyer to know exactly what he is paying for.

The statement says that the "actual preparation of prescriptions will be governed by another addition to the regulations."

MacDonald Wins

OTTAWA (CP) — Donald MacDonald was re-elected for his third term as president of the Canadian Labor Congress at the CL Cconference today as the old guard of organized labor in Canada stood its ground in overcoming a strong challenge from a Nova Scotia delegate, James Bell.

Pentagon Bombed

WASHINGTON (AP) An explosion shattered a restroom in the Pentagon early today, minutes after an anti-war organization claimed it had bombed the office of the air force secretary. A defence department spokesman said the blast could have been caused by a bomb. There were no injuries. The restroom and adjoining corridor were heavily damaged.

Brandt Challenge

BONN (UPI) — Chancellor Willy Brandt won final parliamentary ratification today of his non-aggression treaties with Russia and Poland and immediately challenged the opposition Christian Democrats to early parliamentary elections. Christian Democratic lead Rainer Barzel countered with a demand that Brandt admit his Social Democrats had bankrupted West Germany's finances and then resign.

LABOR BOSS DIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Hall, 78, once Canada's most powerful labor leader who fought the railways for better working conditions, died at his home here Thursday night.

As chief negotiator for 18 unions of non-operating railway employees, he knit them into a joint force and took on the railways in a bitter 11-day nation-wide strike in 1950.

It was the only strike during his term as head of the bargaining team between 1947 and 1965.

Born in June 21, 1893, in Norfolk, England, Hall joined the union in 1918 as a CPR freight checker earning 37 cents an hour for a 10-hour day, six days a week.

Expelled in 1948 from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress for his opposition to Communist-infiltrated member unions, he came back the next year to lead the ouster of these same unions from the congress.

Later he was unstrumental in bringing the Seafarers International Union into Canada to oust the Communist-led Canadian Seamen's Union from the Great Lakes.

Grits: Little Interest Shown

By
CLEMENT CHAPPLE

PENTICTON — With its leadership problems aready solved, there seems little chance that the B.C. Liberal convention will do anything this weekend to spark new interest amongst the general public.

Even for those who haven't yet heard that MP David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich) is taking over from Dr. Pat McGeer, the Liberal convention opening tonight has to rank low among political happenings of the year — an event as marginal as the influence of that party's five seats in the B.C. legislature.

The only new development on the eve of the convention was that industrialist Ben Ginter failed to collect enough signatures for a leadership nomination, leaving Anderson opposed only by Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm, who admits to no sizable support.

Even with a provincial election a 75 per cent possibility this year — according to Premier Bennett — the convention shapes up more as an annual meeting than a vehicle for launching a drive to success at the polls.

A voter opinion survey published today by the Vancouver Province reinforces the view that the Liberals aren't about to leap into power. In fact the Province's analysis says the Liberals will lose one seat.

But, after several appearances in the last 10 days in ridings throughout the province, Anderson was no more expectant of a Liberal bandwagon developing than he was the day he announced he would seek the leadership.

Chatting privately en route to Penticton Thursday night, the 34-year-old bachelor reiterated the common observation that Liberals hardly seem to exist outside the affluent areas around Vancouver.

Still, the Liberals have little to lose, much to gain, and, as party president Mel Couvelier says, Anderson is the first political leader of the Kennedy

Peterson Asks Business to Curb Raises

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson today called upon Canadian businessmen to institute a 6.5 per cent limit on increases of wages and salaries.

He said business had to take the lead to keep costs in line in the absence of federal government controls.

Peterson told the convention of Financial Executives Institute at the Empress Hotel:

"The provincial government has been, I think, successful in maintaining a 6.5 per cent limit on increases of wages and salaries paid out of the public purse."

He noted that while restrictions had been imposed in the United States, the federal government in Canda was maintaining a hands-off policy in regards to wage and price increases.

UP TO BUSINESS

"It is up to Canadian business to maintain a limit (to wage increases) if we are to remain competitive and be able to export to the United States."

Peterson's comments came at the end of his welcoming address at the opening session of the conference which has attracted 350 businessmen from Canada and the United States.

He noted that his call for wage restraints went beyond the usual welcome speech but felt it was urgent to make the statement today.

In an interview before the conference began, keynote speaker Frank Capon of Montreal, president of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants, said the federal budget reduction in corporation taxes was courageous and a step in the right direction.

"It was less of a political budget and more of a policy budget than could be expected in an election year," Capon said.

He was relieved to see there were no formal restraints on prices or wages as government controls are not long-term solutions.

Business and labor could work out their problems themselves if both sides used restraint.

"It is easy emotionally to say implement wage and price controls. But it is just like putting a cap on the bottle. The pressure builds up."

SMALLER MARKET

A better long-term solution was to let a free market solve its own problems as it would if labor is not too demanding in wage negotiations.

He said if Canadians wanted to maintain an independent nation outside the American orbit we would have to pay the price in terms of lower wages than those in the U.S.

In a market of 20 million it is impossible to reach the level of productivity of the Americans who have a market of 200 million.

Demands for pay parity with the United States could only lead to continental union and loss of the Canadian identity, Capon sid.

Another major speaker at the conference this morning was Kenneth Hall of Vancouver, operations manager of the Trans-Mountain Oil Pipe Line Company.

Discussing costs of the proposed Mackenzie River Valley pipeline, he said:

"No one knows the real cost of laying pipe in the Arctic. Until the first few hundred miles are laid no one will.

"But writers and speakers continue to make economic evaluations and compare alternate routes on a wide variation of cost estimates.

"The present newspaper figure for the 800 mile Alyeska (Alaska) line are $2.5 to $3.5 billion," Hall said.

"A 1,500 mile gas line from Prudhoe Bay to Northern Alberta is quoted at $2 billion. A 2,300 mile gas line from Prudhoe Bay to Southern Manitoba is quoted at $5 billion. Rather wide variations to say the least," he said.

The Dying Art of Talk —Is There a Way Back?

My waste basket has been on time-and-a-half of late, since my name obviously found its way onto a Toronto-based junk mail list, coping with money-back guarantees to make a better man of me.

There's a daily avalanche of literature offering correspondence courses on how to do almost everything. Hardly a day slips by that I don't decline a free, introductory offer to teach me how to breed Chinchillas, how to be a private detective, how to improve what remains of my mind, how to read 10,000 words a minute, how to write for money (a course I desperately need), how to keep bees, hotels, motels and sanity. Just mail the convenient little form and whole new worlds will open.

The offer that intrigues me most, however, is a 12-lesson program from an outfit called The Conversation Clinic with a money-back promise that I may not only enrich my own life, but those of everyone within earshot, presuming they would shut up and pay attention once I've graduated. Conversation, says the brochure, may be used "to manipulate the shuttle that weaves together the threads of fine and worthwhile friendship." I suspect that the line was written by someone who has taken a course in how to write for money.

I don't want to knock this or any other lessons because I hold to the idea that trying to learn anything is better than just sitting around looking out the window, and, besides, this particular offer could hardly be more timely.

Conversation fell upon evil days the moment we dimmed the lights and flicked on the hypnotic eye of a television set. I daresay there are vast numbers of folks who may wonder from time to time, if they've entirely lost the ability to communicate except to shout back at the tube. (There is a deodorant commercial on now in which a young woman holds up the frock that caused her embarrassment before she found the magic solution and I shout back at that one quite regularly.)

Still, I have certain doubts that conversation is something that may be learned in 12 lessons or even twelve hundred and, even if it could, it might be as dangerous as a course in making bombs. Reading the promises of the Conversation Clinic one can imagine a group of graduates babbling away like magpies or early morning radio announcers. That way, of course, lies madness.

The pamphlet before me merely hints at the clinic's methods, but it does promise to teach the student, in the very first lesson, eight "sure-fire topics of conversation" and how to add interest to "even such themes as talking about the weather," an inducement that won't help sales much in Victoria where hardly anyone talks about anything else.

I keep reflecting moodily on what it would be like to encounter one of the clinic's honor students on a fishing trip. Perhaps nowhere in the world is there a severer test of conversational rapport than in a small boat cut off from escape by deep water. I have been in such circumstances too often with men grimly determined to manipulate the shuttle that weaves together the threads of friendship, men with at least eight sure-fire topics guaranteed to ruin any genuine empathy. Thus I'm all too aware that the world's worst conversationalist is the misguided or insecure gent who thinks that talk must be kept banging over the net or it's no game.

Years ago I took a certain clergyman up to Porlier Pass, a man whose writings I had admired, only to find that he was the sort who keeps leaping, lead-footed, from one weighty subject to another, apparently convinced that conversation is made, not born. Near the end of a long and fishless day I was sure that sheer inertia had stilled him and that we might troll home in blessed silence without any further need for compulsive dialogue. He was silent for perhaps a minute and then, brightly, inquired, "What are your views on cremation?" We never fished again.

The clinic's brochure quotes a resident philosopher to underscore the claim that conversation is the staff of life, to wit: "Long talks before an open fire or discussions under the trees as we walk in the hills may be the deepest joy of life."

No one could quarrel with that, mind you, but it must never be forgotten that conversation, in any setting, is distasteful — "mustard in a child's mouth," as Boswell once noted — if it is anything less than natural and spontaneous. Effortless talk is the second finest communication between two humans. Put it in the mouth of someone who uses it merely to fill a vacuum and it is an intrusion. Men and women have said more to each other before an open fire or on a mountain trail by utter silence.

So I doubt seriously if the clinic's claim may be justified. What might be taught is the art of intelligent listening which is really what we've forfeited in the age of television. The frightening ability to absorb without understanding or contemplation seems sure to be the ultimate curse of the tube. Already we see the conquest of TV over conversation, the viewers capacity for taking in vast quantities of the spoken word without a reciprocating response.

The way back is not in 12 easy lessons, but in a groping, sensitive effort to recapture that art of the face-to-face exchange of ideas. Chinchilla-breeding or hotel management are more easily learned than that.

DUCK'S DILEMMA is how to teach youngsters to swim when workmen have drained the water from the training pool — Harbor Yacht Pond on Dallas Road. From the size of the brood, it appeared the mother ducks had elected one of their members as sitter while the rest took a break until the pond has been cleaned of winter's debris and refilled. Saanich To Pick Up Centre?

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Victoria isn't going to take the initiative in efforts to develop a convention centre, Saanich should "step in and show some leadership," Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry said today.

Newberry said the city's reaction to Premier Bennett's recent offer to participate in construction costs seemed to be "to make light of it."

"It was a serious offer and it ought to be considered seriously. But if the city is going to disregard it perhaps Saanich might become involved."

Bennett said last month the province would pay one-third of the costs of construction up to a maximum of $2.5 million if the city puts up one-third of the cost plus the land and private enterprise and "individuals" find the remainder.

At the time, city aldermen said the terms of the offer were unacceptable and Mayor Peter Pollen dismissed it as "politicking" on Bennett's part.

Newberry said today a desirable concept would be one providing not only cultural and convention facilities but also embracing such activities as ice skating — in other words a true multi-use centre.

Other than accommodation, there was no reason why such a centre should necessarily be in the centre of the city. "There are areas in Saanich where it could go."

He noted that there is an increasing tendency in Saanich for community organizations to become involved in providing recreational programs and facilities, and said these groups might be willing to participate in a much larger project such as a civic-convention centre.

If Saanich did take the initiative — and Newberry stressed that he hasn't sounded out fellow-aldermen on the idea — it would expect also "to become involved in any revenue" resulting, he added.

Meanwhile, Victoria Ald. Ove Witt suggested the financing problem might be tackled on an intermunicipal basis, as a convention centre would benefit the entire area.

"The city's share would be the largest, of course, because it would benefit the most," he said.

However, Witt questioned the need for such a "grandiose" scheme as that proposed by the Pacific Centre Foundation, for a combined cultural and convention centre on the site of the old Crystal Gardens. Cost of the project has been estimated at $6 to $7 million.

"I would like to see first a 1,500-seat centre primarily for the purpose of conventions."

Track Meet Chopped

The annual district-wide track and field championships for elementary school students will not be held this year in Greater Victoria.

The decision has been made by the Elementary Schools' Sports Council. Reasons given were a lack of time for preparation and the effects of the school board's cutbacks in the 1972 budget.

The usual zone championships will be held this year, with most taking place at Centennial Stadium. However, the over-all championships, with winners of events from the zone meets competing, will not take place.

Bob Campbell, sports council chairman, said bad weather around Easter kept many schools from getting their track and field facilities ready in time for the championships.

The six zone meets will involve about 36 schools, a district spokesman said, and from 3,000 to 4,000 students.

Five of the meets will be held at Centennial Stadium with the other taking place at Esquimalt high school's new facilities.

Mistrust Linked to Oil Deals

Canada is having difficulty convincing Americans it can be trusted to deliver oil over the long term, federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said in Victoria today.

Security of supply, he said, was one of the most difficult problems in negotiations over pipeline routes through Canada.

"I hope we can have an early and substantive exchange of views to clarify the U.S. position. In my view Canada has and will continue to be a secure supplier of petroleum products to U.S. markets," he said.

★ ★ ★

"Yet the decision to proceed with the (Alaska) pipeline revealed the U.S. desire expressed by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, to approve the route in part because the U.S. would retain total jurisdiction and exclusive use of the pipeline moving Prudhoe Bay oil southward to markets."

Macdonald, addressing the convention of Financial Executives Institute at the Empress Hotel, said negotiations would continue with the U.S. in an effort to obtain joint use of a Canadian route.

★ ★ ★

He added that Canada was watching with concern the U.S. decision to proceed with the Alaska route.

"We are still far from assured that out coastline will be adequately protected from the hazards of major oil spills resulting from stepped up tanker traffic and our representations for protection will continue."

Macdonald noted that Canada is running a rapidly increasing surplus of exports over imports of oil and natural gas.

Over the long term new policies may have to be devised to reverse this flow as Canada's own needs increase.

"Canada's requirements for oil and natural gas in the year 2000 may well be three or four times the amounts used in 1970.

"Just to meet Canadian requirements, we can expect to need additional reserves approximately equal to all proven reserves to date," Macdonald said.

★ ★ ★

He said it was important that investment capital to finance oil and gas exploration and development be raised to a larger extent in Canada than has been the case up to now.

"We are entering a phase in our development when we can lean more heavily n our own resources.

"This, of course, should not be construed to mean that we no longer need or want foreign help and capital in the development of our economy but rather that Canadians are capable of carrying a bigger load than they have been carrying and that they should have the opportunity of investing in our future growth."

Stores Sought For Development

Negotiations with major store operators are under way for development of a $1 million shopping centre on treed land opposite Saanich municipal hall.

Property manager Richard Talbot said Anglo-Canadain Management Co. Ltd. is planning tentatively to have the centre open in 1973.

A submission is expected to be made to Saanich planning department in two or three weeks.

Buildings would cover some 100,000 square feet, the maximum permissible for the site, and surrounding parking area would be installed with a view to landscaping, retaining as many as possible of the trees remaining from the former residential - greenhouse - undeveloped land.

Talbot said three major stores are envisaged, including a food outlet and a junior department store of some 20,000 square feet each and a large drug store of 10,000 to 20,000 square feet in area.

The remaining space would be divided between about 10 specialty stores, Talbot said.

Former owner of the site is Kelly Douglas and Co. Ltd., which may still be interested in the property for lease purposes following development.

A strong demand for retail accommodation exists in the north Douglas area, where rents at Town and Country shopping centre have risen to $6.25 a square foot.

Talbot said Town and Country has the highest traffic volume per week of any Victoria shopping centre, and the new site lying in the next block north is a prime site with good exposure to traffic moving to Patricia Bay Highway.

COURSE IDEAS WANTED

Camosun College's community services division is looking to the public for help in planning its courses for next year.

Ideas for courses are being welcomed for anyone. All the college has to do is find a suitable instructor and try to make the course economically viable.

Community services director Alan Batey said today that "now is the time" for the community to let the planners at Camosun know their feelings about courses, rather than wait for the offerings to be established.

"This is the planning of a full community program and we are anxious that that community have an input," Batey said. He said letters or phone calls should be addressed to him at the college for people who have course suggestions.

Camosun's community services program offers about 500 courses over the year and involves between 12,000 and 13,000 persons.

Nonsuch Welcomed by Throngs

Canada's early history came alive today for the thousands jammed the Causeway and the Victoria coastline to welcome the 53-foot ketch Nonsuch.

An exact copy of the ship, whose 17th-century fur-trading expedition began a commercial empire, the Nonsuch received a reception seldom offered those afloat.

Ships tooted whistles — as did an onshore paint plant, a fire tug led her in, spilling water skywards.

On dock to greet the replica and her crew was a large crowd of notables from Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Premier Bennett to an agog section of Greater Victoria mayors and aldermen.

Fittingly enough, one of the pieces was Alouette, stirring memories of the French-Canadian traders Pierre Radisson and Sieur des Groseilliers, whose urgings resulted in the commissioning of the Nonsuch's historic journey.

Even royalty attended today's ceremony. Sitting in the Nonsuch's stern as she came alongside was "King Charles II," the king who gave the Hudson's Bay Company its charter after Nonsuch returned to England from Canada.

As she eased into the Inner Harbor under power but with sails listlessly flying, the Nonsuch returned the noisy greetings with a few salutes, fired broadside, of her own.

Today was the day for dignitaries.

From now until May 29 Victoria's citizenry will also be able to admire close-hand the imagination-stirring vessel.

The Nonsuch will be open to the public each day from 7 to 9 p.m. and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

Summer over, the Nonsuch will 'swallow the anchor' and head for Winnipeg where she will be on permanent display at the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature.

Bennett Scoffs at 'Socreds-Slipping' Survey

"That's wonderful," Premier Bennett said this morning of a newly-released survey indicating Social Credit popularity has declined to the point where an election now might result in a minority government.

"At least we're going to be elected again," he quipped.

The survey, in a copyrighted story in the Vancouver Province today, suggested that the official opposition New Democratic Party would only be a handful of seats behind in a post-election legislature — the closest that party has come to power since 1952, when it was within one seat of the Socreds.

"That's pretty good from the Vancouver Province," the premier said. "Remember the last election — every election . . . they're always hinting Social Credit is going to lose."

The premier puts little stock in computer polls. "My people poll shows we will win with a fair majority," he said.

This year?

The Province poll was compiled from computer-analysed voter opinion samples from all areas of the province. Fifty interviews were conducted in each of British Columbia's 55 constituencies.

On that basis, an immediate election would result in the following seat distribution, with the present number held by each party in brackets following:

An important part of the poll was the undecided vote indicated — 24 per cent, which suggests the nature of the campaigns in the next election will be critical to its outcome and that all parties will be concentrating on the undecided votes.

The Province survey indicates that Social Credit, now in its 20th consecutive year of government, is losing strength to the Tories. Curiously, however, it also shows that while the Tories are regaining strength by stealing Socred votes, they may not be able to even hold the two seats they have at present.

Conservative representation in the Legislature at present is not elected, but came as a result of two Socred defections.

The Tory part of the picture in the next election, according to the Province, will be a very small one, however. The only real gainers will be the New Democratic Party. And the Liberals will be holding the balance of power.

The Province says two ridings may be tied — Cariboo and the Kamloops constituency of Rehabilitation Minister P.A. Gaglardi, with the Socreds and NDP matching vote for vote.

The computers have given the poll a certain degree of flexibility. With other factors introduced, it says, the Socred seat total could go as high as 28, a bare majority, with the NDP dropping to 21.

Ottawa Sets 3-Point Plan for B.C. Ships

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The federal transport ministry is launching a three-stage program which ultimately will control marine traffic on the British Columbia coast.

The first phase begins July 1 and covers waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland from Cape Flattery at the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait to Cape Mudge near Campbell River, H. O. Buchanan, the ministry's regional director of marine services, said from Vancouver today.

Ships of 100 tons or more and towboats where vessel and tow extend 100 feet or more are being asked to take part on a voluntary basis initially.

Phase 2, expected to follow in about a year, will make participation compulsory.

The first two phases will be essentially a co-operative marine navigation information service, with ships in the waters covered reporting at each of 14 established locations.

Vessels will radio name, location, course, type of tow and anticipated arrival at the next checkpoint on a VHF radio channel, to be monitored by other marine traffic and the transport ministry from its station at Vancouver airport.

Buchanan said introduction of Phase 2 will depend on availability of receiving and transmitting equipment because vessels in addition to monitoring other traffic will be able to ask a shore station for information.

Phase 3, for which there is no target date, envisages complete radar monitoring and track plotting of shipping along as much of the B.C. coast as proves necessary.

Buchanan is the federal officer responsible for co-or-

CALGARY GIRL BITTEN BY WOLF

Anita Bartlett suffered injuries to the head and upper part of her body and was in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Police who cornered the animal after a 30-minute chase and killed it with a shotgun said they believed it had been partly domesticated.

A department of agriculture veterinarian positively identified the animal as a wolf and neighborhood residents said it had been seen in the southwest part of the city for two weeks.

Tests were being conducted to determine if it was rabid.

N. Viets Decimated At Kontum

SAIGON (CP) — North Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam's central highlands attacked the outer defences of Kontum today, but anti-personnel mines and U.S. bombers and helicopter gunships drove them back in disarray, field reports said.

The 2,000 troops drove to within two miles of the provincial capital, and at times the fighting was hand-to-hand. But it appeared to be a probe or show of strength, rather than an assault to capture the city.

South Vietnamese spokesmen reported 92 of the attackers killed, many of them by the U.S. F-4 Phantoms and B-52 bombers that supported the defenders.

They said three Saigon troops were killed and seven were wounded, but the casualties were believed to be higher.

Field reports said the advancing troops detonated the anti-personnel mines guarding the perimeter, and the steel fragments thrown out by the mines "decimated" them.

NO SUMMER VOTE—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today there will be no federal election this summer.

At a special lunch-time news conference, the prime minister put down speculation that he intended to dissolve Parliament and call a general election, possibly in July.

And he ruled out an August election at the same time. "There will not be a summer election — but it might be anytime after summer and up to the middle of 1973."

"I hope now you will relax," he told reporters.

A few moments earlier, the prime minister met his party caucus and made the same announcement there.

He told reporters that he has been saying for months that election machinery should be cooled.

Pension Bills Clear Senate

OTTAWA (CP) The government's two pension bills ended their speedy passage through the Senate today and were to receive royal assent formally making them law — at 12:30 p.m. PDT.

The Conservative opposition allowed rules of the Senate to be waived to permit third and final reading of bills to increase old age pensions and veterans allowances retroactive to January.

The two bills only reached the Senate Thursday afternoon.

Putting the bills into law means that about 805,000 Canadians receiving the basic old-age security pension of $80 a month get an increase of $2.88 monthly retroactive to January, providing a back-pay sum of $17.23 each on top of the normal $80 in June.

Union Chiefs Stay in Jail Until Tuesday

QUEBEC (CP) — Three imprisoned Quebec labor leaders will not be freed before next Tuesday from Orsainville jail here, despite requests for day parole, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said today.

Choquette's statement in the Quebec national assembly may indicate no bargaining on new public service contracts can begin before next week, since unions have demanded the presence of their imprisoned leaders at the bargaining table.

Legal technicalities were being worked out after receipt Thursday by the justice department of requests from the three that they receive day parole to enable them to join the bargaining. They would return to prison at night.

Premier Robert Bourassa said early today, after a two-hour Liberal caucus meeting that ended in the early-morning hours, that dealing with the requests was "essentially a judicial question."

Choquette had said earlier: "Each case will be studied before they are released.

ACT ALLOWS RELEASE

The requests were made under the Probation and Detention Establishments Act, which permits release of prisoners for short periods of time.

A union common front protesting the jailings said Wednesday it was up to the government to assure attendance of the leaders at negotiation sessions.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette and Solicitor-General Roy Fournier confirmed late Thursday that the justice department had recieved requests from Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau for their temporary release.

LABOR BOSS DIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Hall, 78, once Canada's most powerful labor leader who fought the railways for better working conditions, died at his home here Thursday night.

As chief negotiator for 18 unions of non-operating railway employees, he knit them into a joint force and took on the railways in a bitter 11-day nation-wide strike in 1950.

It was the only strike during his term as head of the bargaining team between 1947 and 1965.

Born in June 21, 1893, in Norfolk, England, Hall joined the union in 1918 as a CPR freight checker earning 37 cents an hour for a 10-hour day, six days a week.

Expelled in 1948 from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress for his opposition to Communist-infiltrated member unions, he came back the next year to lead the ouster of these same unions from the congress.

Later he was unstrumental in bringing the Seafarers International Union into Canada to oust the Communist-led Canadian Seamen's Union from the Great Lakes.

Drug Cost Cut Ordered in B.C.

New regulations under the Pharmacy Act passed Thursday allow pharmacists in certain cases to dispense cheaper, generic drugs rather than brand-name products.

In a prepared statement Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said in the future a pharmaceutical chemist will be able to dispense a brand other than that indicated by the prescribing doctor as long as the doctor does not stipulate otherwise.

However, if a doctor stipulates "no substitute" on the prescription the pharmacist must dispense the brand name indicated.

Loffmark said that in the past the pharmacists had to dispense whatever drug the doctor suggested but under the new regulations will be able to exercise product selection.

CHEAPER DRUGS

"They're authorizing the pharmacists to substitute a cheaper drug for an expensive one of the same quality," he said.

The minister said that because of extensive advertising some trade name drugs have been selling for $10 to $14 per 100 units whereas the same quality generic drug would sell for only $2.49 per 100 units.

Therefore, he said, the new regulations in such cases will provide a saving of about $10 per prescription.

"It will thoroughly discourage high-cost drugs where the high cost is based on nothing but promotion," Loffmark said.

The new regulations also state that all prescriptions must be labelled with the brand or proper name, strength and quantity of the preparation unless otherwise specified by the doctor.

Loffmark said this regulation will allow the buyer to know exactly what he is paying for.

The statement says that the "actual preparation of prescriptions will be governed by another addition to the regulations."

NEWS BRIEFS

MacDonald Wins

OTTAWA (CP) — Donald MacDonald was re-elected for his third term as president of the Canadian Labor Congress at the CLC Convention today as the old guard of organized labor in Canada stood its ground in overcoming a strong challenge from a Nova Scotia delegate, James Bell.

Pentagon Bombed

WASHINGTON (AP) An explosion shattered a rest-room in the Pentagon early today, minutes after an anti-war organization claimed it had bombed the office of the air force secretary. A defence department spokesman said the blast could have been caused by a bomb.

Grits: Little Interest Shown

By
CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

PENTICTON — With its leadership problems aready solved, there seems little chance that the B.C. Liberal convention will do anything this weekend to spark new interest amongst the general public.

Even for those who haven't yet heard that MP David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich) is taking over from Dr. Pat McGeer, the Liberal convention opening tonight has to rank low among political happenings of the year — an event as marginal as the influence of that party's five seats in the B.C. legislature.

The only new development on the eve of the convention was that industrialist Ben Ginter failed to collect enough signatures for a leadership nomination, leaving Anderson opposed only by Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm, who admits to no sizable support.

Even with a provincial election a 75 per cent possibility this year — according to Premier Bennett — the convention shapes up more as an annual meeting than a vehicle for launching a drive to success at the polls.

A voter opinion survey published today by the Vancouver Province reinforces the view that the Liberals aren't about to leap into power. In fact the Province's analysis says the Liberals will lose one seat.

But after several appearances in the last 10 days in ridings throughout the province, Anderson was no more expectant of a Liberal bandwagon developing than he was the day he announced he would seek the leadership.

Chatting privately en route to Penticton Thursday night, the 34-year-old bachelor reiterated the common observation that Liberals hardly seem to exist outside the affluent areas around Vancouver.

Still, the Liberals have little to lose, much to gain, and, as party president Mel Couvelier says, Anderson is the first political leader of the Kennedy

TV Questions and Answers

By PENNY PENCE

Q. How terrible that Glen Campbell was cancelled! I think it's awful! How does Glen feel about it?—O.U.

A. According to his spokesmen, Glen's relieved because now he can go back to movie-making — although one wonders why. His last film was Norwood, which many considered an interesting study in mediocrity.

Q. I think the Brady Bunch is really dull, but my kids love it. They've asked me to write and see if the series will return next season. I'd like to know if they'll beef it up any?—D.A.

A. It will return, but beefed up? I doubt it. There'll be one small addition on the first three shows — those episodes will be filmed in Hawaii.

Q. Please tell me why Lily Tomlin is suing the Laugh-In show.—P.W.

A. Lily felt her original contract with that show promised her many more opportunities than she was ever actually offered. Now, in an effort to break free from her commitment to Laugh-In, she charges that producers did not live up to the agreement, and "moved in directions not contemplated at the time of the contracting."

Q. A friend told me that Peggy Lipton has a unique beauty regime and I'd like to know what it is. My friend says it has to do with Peggy being a health food fan.—B.C.

A. Peggy does enjoy health foods, and even prefers to use organic mixtures as a complexion aid. She makes her facial masques from cucumber cream or oatmeal.

Q. I understand that Gary Owens of Laugh-In has a record in release. Can you tell us the title?—J.B.

A. Yes. It's called The Presidents, and Gary explains it as a takeoff on all those who find so many similarities between our chief executives—past and present.

Q. We weren't fond of Bearcats, but Rod Taylor has always been one of our favorite actors. Where is he now?—A.A.

A. At the moment, Taylor's in Mexico where he's appearing in the John Wayne picture, The Great Train Robbery.

Q. Who writes Paul Lynde's material? I can't believe that different writers can imitate his unmistakable brand of humor.—K.R.

A. The star of his own TV series next fall, Lynde writes most of his own material, even when guesting on such shows as Carol Burnett's and Dean Martin's.

Black Noon (xx), on 7 at 9. Black magic provides the eerie essence in this 1971 TV-movie. Roy Thinnes stars as a minister fighting an unseen power that has gripped a desert town north of Los Angeles. Excellent supporting cast with Lyn Loring, Yvette Mimieux, Ray Milland and Gloria Graham.

North West Mounted Police (xx), on 12 at 9. Cecil B. De Mille's colorful tale of Canadian troops involved in an 1885 Indian uprising. Starring in this 1940 adventure are Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard and Robert Preston.

Companions in Nightmare (xx), on 7 at 11:30. Anne Baxter, Gig Young, Melvyn Douglas and Dana Wynter star in this made-for-TV psychological thriller about a group therapy session disrupted by murder.

In Love and War (xxx), on 12 at 11:35. Based on the novel The Big War, this film shows war's impact on three Marines: a hard-drinking kid; a career soldier and a wealthy intellectual. Cast includes Robert Wagner and Bradford Dillman.

The Impatient Heart (xxx), on 8 at midnight. (See earlier for details.)

Tension (xxx), on 4 at 1. An unfaithful wife and a seemingly meek pharmacist become involved in murder. Starring in this 1949 mystery are Richard Basehart, Audrey Totter, Cyd Charisse and Barry Sullivan.

The Boogie Man Will Get You (xx), on 7 at 1:30. A 1942 Boris Karloff thriller.

The Ox-Bow Incident (xxxx), on 12 at 1:35. A powerful tale of lynching told with simple force and superb cast including Henry Fonda, Dana Andrews and Anthony Quinn.

MOVIES

Saturday

The Kid from Left Field (xxx). On 4 at 12:30. Dan Daily, Anne Bancroft and Lloyd Bridges star in this 1953 baseball story.

Stage to Thunder Rock (xx). On 11 at 12:30. Wesrern adventure with Barry Sullivan and Scott Brady.

Destro, All Monsters (x). On 7 at 3. Japanese-made sci-fi.

Bachelor Flat (xxx). On 5 at 4. A dizzy comedy about a shy professor of archeology caught in a romantic complication with an aggressive teenager. Terry-Thomas, Tuesday Weld and Richard Beymer.

Death Takes a Holiday (xxx). On 4 at 8:30. A 1971 remake of the 1934 classic. Myrna Loy and Melyvn Douglas play the subjects of Death's investigation, a couple who remain vital and dynamic despite personal tragedy. Good supporting cast with Monte Markham and Yvette Mimieux.

One More Train to Rob (xx). On 5 and 8 at 9 and 6 at 11:20. George Peppard stars in this tongue-in-cheek yarn about a bandit out to get his partner who sent him to jail and stole his girl. Supporting cast includes Diana Muldaur, John Vernon and France Nuyen.

Mr. Hobbs Takes a Vacation (xxx). On 5 at 11:20. A family's holiday plans are thrown into comic chaos when they rent a dilapidated beach house for the summer. James Stewart and Maureen O'Hara star in this delightful comedy.

Blood Commandos (xx). On 4 at 11:55. The six-day Arab-Israeli War of 1967 frames this battle tale starring Robert Fuller and John Hudson.

Cape Fear (xxx). On 8 at 11:55. A tense drama about a lawyer and his family who are threatened by a sadistic ex-convict. Excellent cast with Gregory Peck, Polly Bergen and Robert Mitchum.

Psycho (xxx). On 7 at midnight. Alfred Hitchcock's brilliant and terrifying study of murder and madness at an eerie run-down motel. Cast includes Anthony Perkins, Janet Leigh and Vera Miles.

The Big Knife (xxx). On 10 at midnight. A Hollywood star tries to break a contract with a grasping producer and causes tragedy in the process. Perceptive and well-acted, this 1955 drama stars Jack Palance, Ida Lupino, Rod Steiger and Wendell Corey.

New Series

Bless This House, a British situation comedy series starring Sidney James, returns to CBC-TV this spring and summer, Saturday nights at 9:30.

Sidney plays Sid Abbott — Mr. Average married man — and his interests in life are soccer, beer and women, not necessarily in that order. Like most married men, however, he finds his efforts in pursuing his interests constantly thwarted by his wife, son and daughter, not necessarily in that order.

Sid also likes to think he's with "it" but in actual fact, he wouldn't know "it" if he saw it.

The series concerns itself with the life of the family in general and with Sid in particular. As far as Sid is concerned there exists not so much a generation gap as a grand canyon of misunderstanding and utter bewilderment.

Alka-Seltzer Pays Off

By DAN LEWIS

Two of the hottest new performers on television these days are Jack Aaron and Milt Moss.

Maybe the names don't register, but you know them, and have seen them at least hundreds of times in recent months.

They have catapulted to stardom because of their gastronomical distress. Jack Aaron is the guy who sits in the restaurant explaining how the waiter forced him to eat something: "Try it, you'll like it," exclaims Jack.

The reaction to those two commercials (Alka-Seltzer) is incredible. The dialogue has spread across the country. People exhort each other to "Try it, you'll like it."

"I can't believe I ate the whole thing" has led to a rash of gags, some less imaginative, more obscene.

I met with both Aaron and Moss at Sardie's for lunch one afternoon. The reaction was typical. Jack didn't ask for the waiter's advice on what to eat. He just ordered, and the waiter observed: "You'll like it. You'll like it."

From the Bronx

And, of course, when Moss gave his order, the waiter wanted to know if he could be expected "to eat the whole thing."

Incidentally, both Aaron and Moss, although catapulting to success in commercials for the same company, had never met before this session with me. But that's only half of the irony.

I asked Jack where he's from.

"The Bronx," he answered. "Where else?"

Milt smiled and injected, "I'm from the Bronx, too. What part are you from?" he asked Jack.

"Loring Place," Jack replied.

Turns out, they were raised a block away from each other, went to the same schools (Milt is several years older), but never met before.

Their respective careers have been laborious. Moss has been a stand-up comic for years, working small clubs around the New York area. He's done some TV, once was a regular on a local kiddie show (The Merry Mailman) and, because of a good ear for accents, has done a number of voice-overs for TV commercials.

His father, the late Edward Clark, was a wonderful comic who specialized in playing a clumsy waiter at large banquets. He would walk among the tables, bumping into guests, harassing them, rattling dishes in their faces.

The Alka-Seltzer commercial has changed his career considerably. First of all, he's in demand as a comedian now for the first time in his career. He's also getting more money.

"Last year," Moss explained, "I sent my brochure to Laugh-In producers, hoping to get on the show. They sent it back without even opening the envelope."

Things have changed. This year, Moss said, Laugh-In contacted him.

He went on the Johnny Carson show, coming out first as the right-hand man of Howard Hughes, and Carson asked him, "Is Hughes eccentric?"

Moss replied: "He (Hughes) buys hotels, walks around at night in sneakers and eating pickles, takes baths with his clothes on and people ask is he eccentric. No. He's crazy."

He also recently did a show in Baltimore and was presented with the keys to the city, with two packets of Alka-Seltzer tied to the keys.

Struggling Actor

Jack Aaron has been a struggling actor for a dozen years, probably earning more waiting on tables (mostly in hamburger places, he confided) to keep him going while pursuing an acting career. In recent years, he has done reasonably well on commercials, and has appeared in about 60 of them.

But the "Try it, you'll like it" commercial has been the springboard. "I don't have to audition anymore. I have identification."

Success meant any other change for Aaron?

"Well, it's put me in a different tax bracket — higher. And now I can buy all the books I want. But there's one disconcerting thing. I was walking down the street before and this pretty girl started to eye me. I smiled back, and all of a sudden she yells out, 'Try it, you'll like it.' Here, I thought, she was flirting with me."

Sometimes it helps to be recognized. One night, Aaron was walking briskly down a Manhattan side street when a police car stopped alongside of him and a cop started to question him, thought he might have been suspicious.

Then, Aaron said, the cop looked quizzically at him and asked:

"Where do I know you from?"

TV Commercials 82% More Effective

Television commercials are 82 per cent more effective than magazine ads in generating sales, according to the findings of a study conducted by an independent research company which measured the relative sales effectiveness of the two media.

The study, titled Action Speaks Louder Than Words, was conducted by Tele-Research, Inc., a California-based research company; it was commissioned by the three television networks; ABC, CBS and NBC.

The study, which was conducted between fall, 1970, and summer, 1971, in the metropolitan Los Angeles area, was based on tests of matched pairs of magazine ads and television commercials for 12 different brands of household products commonly available at local supermarkets.

Tele-Research randomly selected shoppers entering supermarkets to participate in the study. They assigned the participants into matched groups — those exposed to television commercials, those exposed to magazine advertising for the same brands with similar copy and creative elements, and a control group not exposed to any advertising.

All of the magazine advertisements were full-page four-color ads. Of the 12 TV commercials, 11 were 30 seconds in length and one was 60 seconds, which approximates the current mix of 30s and 60s on television.

The results showed that, on average, shoppers in the control group (not advertising exposure) made 20.4 purchases per 100. Those exposed to magazine ads made 30.0 purchases, and those who had seen TV commerilals made 37.9 purchases.

The difference in purchases between the control group and those who had seen the magazine ads showed that the magazine group made 9.6 additional purchases. However, those exposed to the TV commercials made 17.5 additional purchases than those who had received no advertising stimulus in the test — giving television advertising an 82 per cent advantage in generating sales over magazine advertising.

Tele-Research operated from mobile vans parked in shopping centres. The interior of the van had an ordinary living room atmosphere. After viewing either the TV commercials or magazine ads, the respondents were asked a series of general questions about the advertising: recall of copy used, believability, interest in buying product, etc.

For their co-operation, the participants were given a booklet of discount coupons for the products advertised. The control group received the same booklet of discount coupons. Coupons were redeemable only on the day of the test and only at the supermarket at the test location. Redemption rates among exposed and unexposed were used to determine the effectiveness of advertising that had just been viewed.

In all, over 4,000 interviews were completed. The average sample for each ad or commercial tested was approximately 300 shoppers.

In order to provide more naturalistic exposure, two methodological sub-studies were also conducted, one in which ads and commercials were exposed within editorial or program content, and the other in which the same commercials were tested in both color and black and white. In all cases, television commercials showed a clear advantage over magazine advertising in generating sales.

Monday

The Young Mr. Pitt (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Story of the political career of William Pitt, who became Prime Minister of England at 24. Excellent cast with Robert Donat, Charles Fox and Robert Morely.

Marilyn (xxx), on 7 at 4. Absorbing compilation of scenes from Marilyn Monroe's 20th Century-Fox films, including her last (the unfinished Something's Got to Give.

Gigot (xxx), on 12 at 8:30. Jackie Gleason give a moving Chaplinesque performance in this story of the adventures of a simple-minded Parisian mute and a prostitute's child.

The Viking Queen (xx), on 4 at 9. On location photography in the Wicklow Mountains of Ireland highlights this otherwise mediocre drama about Roman warfare in ancient Britain.

The Impatient Heart (xxx), on 5 at 9. Award-winning actress Carrie Snodgrass stars in this story of a social worker with problems of her own who throws herself into everyone else's troubles. Good supporting cast with Michael Brandon and Michael Constantine.

Vengeance Valley (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Solid western adventure with Burt Lancaster as a tough ranch foreman. Robert Walker plays his younger brother with an eye for the ladies and a penchant for trouble. Joanne Dru and Sally Forrest plays the ladies in their life.

Look Who's Laughing (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. Classic corn is the 1941 comedy starring Fibber McGee and Molly, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy and Lucile Ball.

The Proud and the Profane (xxx), on 8 at midnight. War and soap opera well mixed about a widow who falls in love with a tough Marine colonel. Good performances by William Holden, Deborah Kerr and Thelma Ritter overcome the triteness of the tale.

SPECIALS

Victoria Day Parade, on 6 at 4. Special coverage of the Annual Victoria Day Parade taped earlier in the day. (2 hours.)

The Eagle and the Hawk, on 4 at 8. A plea for the golden eagle and the red-tailed hawk. In Idaho's rugged Snake River Canyon, their grace and power are observed through the eyes of wildlife expert Morley Nelson and 13-year-old Nell Newman (Daughter of narrator Joanne Woodward). (60 mins.)

212912 — Documentary Special, on 5 at 8. Drug abuse and the returning GI — a study of one man's story. The report follows a Purple Heart winner who returned to the United States to be arrested on a narcotics charge, and was subsequently rehabilitated in a Texas prison. (60 mins.)

Black Coal, Red Power, on 9 at 8. Strip mining on Navajo and Hopi reservations in Arizona — a report. Alternatives to coal mining are also explored; nuclear reactors; geothermic units that harness steam within the earth; and systems employing solar energy. Robert Redford narrates. (90 mins.)

Man at the Centre, on 2 and 6 at 10. A profile of Barker Fairley, Canadian poet and portrait painter. Still an active member of the artistic community at 84, Fairley discusses modern art, his lifelong interest in political issues and his career.

Country Canada Profiles Salmon Fishing Industry

CBC-TV's Country Canada presents a special report on the Atlantic salmon fishing industry, Sunday May 21 at 1:30 p.m.

The program looks at the effects of the recent measures taken by the federal government to protect the salmon — regarded as an endangered species because of overfishing — and Canada's position in the international dispute that has arisen over the harvesting of this fish by Denmark and Canada.

The Atlantic salmon feeding grounds are off the Davis Strait and their spawning grounds in the rivers of the Maritimes, Newfoundland and Quebec. All commercial fishing for salmon in such rivers as the St. John, Miramichi, and Restigouche and in Port aux Basques has been banned — as of May 1st — by order of the Minister of the Environment, Jack Davis, due to the serious decline in the number of salmon returning there. Quebec earlier imposed a similar ban in its own area.

Canada blames Denmark's overfishing for the decline in spawning salmon, but the ban has hit hard the North Shore fishermen, who are being put out of business.

Country Canada's report on the Atlantic salmon issue comes on the eve of the 14-nation meetings of the International Commission for North Atlantic Fisheries which begin in Washington May 25.

CHARLTON HESTON star of the soon-to-be-released film Skyjacked. Heston feels that the media should place more emphasis on what happens to those who succeed and those who don't in their skyjacking attempts.

Air Piracy Glamorized Says Star of Skyjacked

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Charlton Heston stars in Skyjacked, a timely movie due for release in this month of terror in the sky.

Actor Heston, pleased with reviews of his latest picture, holds misgivings about its theme. He thinks the media has glamorized plane hijackers almost as much as films made heroes of stage coach bandits.

"This movie is not a profound document," Heston said. "It has a social point to make.

"The timeliness is almost accidental to the recent rash of skyjacking. I just hope someone who is toying with the idea of hijacking a plane will change his mind after seeing the picture.

"Filmmakers too often say they possess an individuality and should be free to say what they think and feel as a means of artistic expression."

Heston is all for that — to a point.

"Because film is the most powerful of all the arts, it has the greatest impact on the public," said the veteran of scores of movies. "Therefore producers must recognize there are times when responsibility to society outweighs their individual statements as artists.

"That is something we had to keep in mind throughout our filming of Skyjacked. We have a responsibility to audiences.

"Personally, I believe all hijackers fall into a psychotic pattern. They have never enjoyed power and luxury as individuals. But they hope to find it in a new life through hijacking a plane. "They literally fly to another life they think will be marvellous."

The big man sipped from a glass of iced tea and stretched his legs to get more comfortable.

"I think television news is derelict in giving so much time to skyjackers," he went on. "Once the big show of capturing the plane is over, the story is ignored. You see very little on the tube about the apprehension and punishment of the hijackers.

"The public isn't told that the skyjackers who go to Cuba end up chopping sugar in the fields or are thrown in jails.

"Emphasis should be placed on what happens to those who succeed and those who don't in their skyjacking attempts.

Heston plays the captain of a 707 jetliner when he gets the word several thousand feet in the air that a skyjacker is aboard. The script doesn't reveal the identity of the hijacker for the first 20 minutes or so of the film.

To gain a degree of verisimilitude as an airlines captain, Heston spent hours in the cockpit of 707 liners and more hours actually flying a simulator at Los Angeles International Airport.

"Spending that time with pilots, you begin to understand the captain's responsibility for the safety of his passengers," he said.

"We had a TWA pilot on the set as technical consultant. And in the aircraft photography I actually sat at the controls of a 707 in flight. Let me tell you, that was quite a thrill."

"I'd give it to him," Heston replied with a grin. "But I'd see to it the strings were cut."

Cronkite Recalls Eventful Decade

On the recent occasion of his 10th anniversary as anchorman of the CBS Evening News, Correspondent Walter Cronkite reflected that the past decade probably was the most newsworthy of any similar period in American history.

"When I inherited the CBS Evening News, the world was vastly different than it is today," says Cronkite, who assumed the anchor chair on April 16, 1962.

"In '62 we hadn't yet been brought face to face with the violent nature of our society. It was one and a half years before President Kennedy was assassinated; and we were all somewhat euphoric about the prospects of life in America. But then the escalation of the Vietnam War, the John Kennedy assassination, then Martin Luther King, then Bobby Kennedy — violence in the inner cities and on the campuses, all shook up our world. These have been quite a 10 years."

Has the CBS Evening News With Walter Cronkite changed much in the past decade?

"Well," answers Cronkite, "of course the events of the 1960s have made as much of an impact on the Evening News as they have on the lives of the American people . . . for instance, Vietnam was a rather strange and distant place to most Americans in 1962. But now it is a part of all our lives, and that fact is reflected in what we report and the amount of reporting we do.

"The situation is much the same with America's great venture into space. We're now approaching the end of that era, but 10 years ago we were thrilled by John Glenn's flight at the first American astronaut to orbit the earth. Now that all seems rather routine.

"So much has changed, but at the same time so much is the same. Our job is the same — to report each night the day's major developments in America and the world, and that job has never ceased to be exciting."

A major change in the CBS Evening News took place in September, 1963, when the broadcast was lengthened from 15 minutes to 30 minutes. Thus, the CBS Evening News With Walter Cronkite became network television's first half-hour, five-days-a-week news broadcast.

"We still don't have enough time for all the news," says Cronkite, "but we're twice as well off as when we started."

For the last 10 years, the CBS Evening News has been the focus of Cronkite's day. "Basically," he says, "it is what I live for. I always feel a little uneasy when I have to get involved in other projects, such as Apollo.

"But I welcome the opportunity CBS News affords me, the philosophy of the news executives, that I should get out and cover stories in the field. That is essential to maintain one's perspective."

Cronkite's travels over the decade have taken him overseas with Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon; to Vietnam, the Middle East and behind the Iron Cirtain, and to many capitals to interview world leaders.

CBS Expands News Programs

An expanded schedule of CBS News documentary and public affairs broadcasting will be presented during the 1972-73 season on the CBS Television Network, it was announced by Robert D. Wood, president of the CBS Television Network, and Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News.

"Plans for the new season," Salant noted, "call for an increase of between 15 and 20 per cent in public affairs programming on the CBS Television Network over the 1971-72 season."

The subject matter of the CBS News documentary and public affairs broadcasts will be announced at a later date. At present, plans call for some of them to be broadcast in the two-hour time period normally scheduled for The CBS Thursday Night Movies.

Tuesday

Taggart (xx), On 6 and 8 at 12:45. A violent tale of murder and revenge in the old west starring Dan Duryea and Jean Hale.

Stranger on the Run (xxx), On 7 at 1. A well-made TV western about the relentless hounding of a murder suspect with a good cast including Henry Fonda, Anne Baxter and Michael Parks.

It Hppened One Summer (xxx), On 5 at 8:30. The first musical version (1945) of State Fair with Jeanne Crain, Dana Andrews, Dick Haymes and Vivian Blaine. Good family entertainment is this tale of a family's visit to the Iowa Fair.

The Astronaut (xxx), On 4 at 9. An unusual love story with Jackie Cooper portraying a space-agency official desperately trying to conceal an astronaut's death on Mars. His plan: groom a stand-in who will pose as the dead man long enough to ensure funds from Congress. Monte Markham plays the imposter and Susan Clark as the astronaut's wife. Uninformed of the tragedy, she greets her returning hero and begins to fall in love all over again.

Extraordinary Seaman (xxx), On 7 and 12 at 11:30. John Frankenheimer directed this romantic farce about the Second World War starring David Niven, Faye Dunaway and Mickey Rooney.

The Boy With Green Hair (xxx), On 2 at 11:50. A 1948 drama about a young war orphan whose hair has turned green overnight. He has a vision that tells him he must convince the world to end wars forever. Good cast with Dean Stockwell, Robert Ryan, Pat O'Brian and Barbara Hale.

Five Finger Exercise (xx), On 6 and 8 at midnight. Not as good as the Broadway play is this 1962 domestic drama about a young German refugee who becomes a tutor in a California household. Strong cast, however, makes it worthwhile. Rosalind Russell, Jack Hawkins and Maximilian Schell.

1720 COOK 384-8181

DAVID SUZUKI geneticist is profiled on CBC's Telescope on Tuesday, May 23, at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

SOPRANO CATHY BERBERIAN is dressed for stripsody, a song she wrote based on a series of comic strips. Along with pianist Paul Helmer, she'll be performing this and other pieces on CBC Tuesday Night on May 23 at 9 p.m. on the CBC-AM Radio Network.

Baroque to Beatles With Noted Soprano

For those who enjoy traditional vocal recitals, this should be appealing . . . but it's also for the Beatles fan! Soprano Cath Berberian and pianist Paul Helmer will present a most unusual recital on CBC Tuesday Night on CBC Radio's AM Network on May 23 at 9:00 p.m. EDT.

The program spans 350 years of music — from Monteverdi's 17th century love song La Lettera Amorosa to Cathy Berberian's own composition Stripsody. Other pieces include Chansons de Bilitis by Debussy, Bird Girl bu Luciano Berio, O' Atti Vocali' by Sylvano Bussotti, and selections by Kurt Weill.

And for the rock music fan, Miss Berberani has included two Beatles tunes sung in Baroque style. She sings Yesterday imitating the style of folk-singer Joan Baez, while Ticket to Ride is sung in the manner of a slightly tipsy Handelian soprano. Baaroque arrangements are by the young Dutch composer Louis Andriessen.

The most unusual piece on the program is Miss Berberian's Stripsody. This work was commissioned by Breman Radio in the spring of 1966 and is basically a collage of the onomatopoeic words used in comic strips to which the sound has been restored. Within this collage, short scenes have been inserted, either quotations from well-known strips such as Peanuts or Superman — or else sequences that could be brief movie scenes.

Traditional this recital isn't, but Miss Berberian views the traditional recital as something which has become a fairly rigid ritual. In recent years she has developed a new recital format which includes many theatrical elements — lighting and staging effects and an over-all quality of the unpredictable.

While she is completely at home in the standard concert repertory, Cath Berberian is renowned for her great contribution to contemporary music and has inspired the creation of many works by leading composers. Names such as Luciano Berio, Henri Pousseur, Darius Milhaud, and John Cage are included in the list.

Suzuki Profiled On CBC-TV Telescope

CBC's Telescope series is repeating (Tuesday, May 23 at 9:30 p.m.) its visit earlier this year with one of Canada's leading young scientists, David Suzuki. As a geneticist, he is well-known in the scientific community for his research with the fruit fly — which may profoundly affect the future of man. As a television personality, he is equally well-known to CBC-TV viewers for his own series last season, Suzuki on Science.

In this Telescope profile, sub-titled The Differences Are Inherited, Suzuki is seen at work in his lab with a group of students and the Telescope cameras give us a tantalizing glimpse through his microscope of some of his experiments with the fruit fly.

He discusses current research in the field of genetics and the world of the future, the possibilities of man discovering the secret of life. One aspect of genetics which has captured the imagination of the public is the possibility of "cloning" — reproducing an exact replica of any given individual in quantity, a dozen Einsteins, or groups of mindless laborers to work on assembly lines.

David Suzuki is an unlikely-looking scientist; young and colorful he seems at first impression more of a hippie. He was born in Vancouver, 1936; obtained his bachelor's degree from Amherst College, Mass.; Ph.D. from the University of Chicago, was post-doctoral fellow at the Rocky Mountain Biological Laboratory, Colorado; was Research Associate at Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Tennessee; Assistant Professor of Genetics at the University of Alberta; then joined the Department of Zoology at the University of British Columbia.

Estate Taxed

WASHINGTON (Reuter) - Audie Murphy's widow said Friday the federal government is trying to collect more than $200,000 in taxes from the estate of the dead war hero and film star.

Murphy, the farm boy who came out of the Second World War with more combat decorations than any other American soldier, was killed last May 28 in a plane crash at Roanoke, Va.

Papers filed by his widow Pamela with the U.S. tax court state that as administrator of her husband's estate, she is being billed by the internal revenue service for $160,000 in unpaid taxes for 1964, 1965 and 1966. She asked the court to settle the dispute by ruling that her husband's determination of the tax he owed for the three years is correct.

Cavett Claims Nielson Ratings Poor System

By GEORGE GENT

NEW YORK — Dick Cavett does not look like a man on probation. A little tired, perhaps, due to the early hour of the interview, but showing only the slightest evidence of the anxiety one might expect in a performer whose show is under threat of cancellation for low ratings.

He appeared much as he does on television — cool, slightly diffident but friendly, intelligent but forever backtracking over his own thought processes for greater clarity or ironic self-depreciation. In fact, he looked more like a man who had been sympathetically profiled in the current New Yorker and had learned there that his show was moving up in the ratings.

"That's nice," he beamed when told about the New Yorker piece, which had been written months before, "maybe it will persuade some viewers to look in on the show." Then, he added sardonically, "Maybe we'll get back those six or eight Nielsen families who have apparently stopped watching."

The sandy-haired performer is convinced that his troubles stem from the inadequacies of the A. C. Nielsen ratings sample, which embraces only 1,200 American homes. Cavett said:

"The program hit a high several months ago and we discovered that it was because six of eight Nielsen families were tuning in, presumable because the network was giving us more advertising and on air promotion. That's a fact!

"But I've never been convinced that those ratings measured my audience, which is heavily made up of college students who sit around in dormatories watching the show. Most of my mail comes from college kids. I once asked young A. C. Nielsen about that on my show and he said something about it requiring a special measurement that would be very expensive. I wonder what 'expensive' means."

But Cavett is not discounting the disastrous impact the Columbia Broadcasting System's decision earlier this year to replace Mery Griffin with late-night movies had had on his own fortunes. Since Feb. 14, when the showing went on the air, CBS's audience jumped 48 per cent while Johnny Carson's already large audience on the National Broadcasting Company held fast and, since Carson moved to Hollywood last week, appears to have increased. While all of this has been happening, Cavett's audience, which was always substantially behind those of the other two networks, has dropped an other 30 per cent.

(Since this writing The Dick Cavett Show has won an Emmy which should help his ratings.—Ed.)

Double Bass Virtuoso On CBC-FM Radio

CBC Radio listeners are in store for an exciting evening on the CBC AM network Thursday, June 1, when Gary Karr presents a recital on Musicscope ata 8:03 p.m. EDT (on CBC-FM Friday, May 26, ata 8 p.m. EDT).

Gary Karr, 30, is generally acknowledged as the world's leading double bass virtuoso. A native of Hollywood, California, he now lives in Halifax. His career has taken him through the United States, Canada, Mexico, Italy, England, Holland, Switzerland, West Germany, Norway and France. He first played in Europe in 1964 at Spoleto, and later that year gave a recital at Wigmore Hall in London.

In addition to concert appearances, Mr. Karr has been a member of the music faculty of the University of Wisconsin, the Juilliard School of Music and the New England Conservatory of Music. He is presently a member of the music faculty of Yale University, as well as a director of the International Institute for the String Bass and founder-editor of the music publication The Bass Sound Post. In Halifax he teaches in public schools as well as holding the position of associate professor of music at Dalhousie University.

His Musicscope recital was originally part of the Halifax CBC Festival of Music, 1971; it was taped at the Neptune Theatre. Performing with Mr. Karr was pianist Monique Gusset.

The program includes a four-movement sonata by Henry Eccles, Fantasy Pieces Opus 73 by Schumann; Chanson Triste by Koussevitzky; Piece en form de Habanera by Ravel; shorter pieces by Gluck, Lorenzetti, Bottesini and Bloch; and the premiere performance of Summer Music by John Tittle.

Labyrinth in Toronto

Labyrinth, the National Film Board of Canada production which gained international fame at Expo '67, is going to Toronto for the summer to be presented in a new format in the cinesphere at Ontario Place.

Labyrinth '72, edited to a 20-minute length and transferred to the sensational new IMAX format, will be shown on a screen six-storeys high and 80 feet wide. Developed in Canada by Multiscreen Corp. for use at Osaka in 1970, IMAX is the only film system in existence which can present a motion picture image of such breath-taking size and clarity.

Ontario Place is a huge entertainment and exhibition complex located on three islands in Lake Ontario. It opened last year and will commence its spring and summer season for this year on May 20, and closing on October 9.

Labyrinth '72, the film story symbolizing man's journey through life, will provide visitors to Ontario Place with an opportunity to see this spectacular presentation in a new format in the 360-seat, eye-catching dome theatre, the cinesphere.

Actor Steps Into Dead Man's Shoes

By DAN LEWIS

Roger Davis almost became a lawyer because his friends taunted him for being a "sissy" when he was a kid and had the notion he wanted to be an actor. So, although he appeared in school productions and church plays, Roger also debated in high school and won the mid-South area debating championship.

He also was a member of the student senate and National Forensic League, and matriculated at Columbia College (pre-law class of '61).

Davis then was accepted at Harvard Law School. And he attended, for six days.

By this time, he still wanted to be an actor, so he decided to pursue it. Now he's a television star, successfully negotiating one of the more difficult assignments of the season.

Duel Popular

When Peter Duel committed suicide in his home, Roger Davis was rushed into the role of Hannibal Heyes alias Joshua Smith in Alias Smith and Jones. For all concerned and the general public, too, it seemed like a temporary assignment, only to fill out the remaining four segments until the end of the season.

Then everyone expected the show to be canceled because the fears were that Duel's personal popularity was too much to replace. He had developed a sort of cultish following, and newspaper offices were deluged with letters from young girls, literally pleading for any unprinted information about Duel.

There were two dramatic events that saved Alias Smith and Jones for next season. First off, a network survey showed that Duel's fans accepted Davis as his replacement. Secondly, for the last five weeks of the regular season, ABC tested Alias Smith and Jones on Saturday nights in certain critical markets around the country against NBC's movie and CBS's Mission: Impossible. The ratings held up very well.

So, Alias Smith and Jones now will be seen next season on Saturday nights.

"We spent this season against Flip Wilson," Davis lamented. "Now we're not going to be opposite Flip next season. We'll only be against All in the Family!

But Davis is speculating that All in the Family is going to lose ground. "The problem with All in the Family is trying to sustain a one-joke thing," he observed.

Obviously, one cannot talk to Roger Davis without attempting to discuss Duel. Davis is willing to talk, and speaks knowledgeably, since they knew each other quite well and had worked together. In fact, they were together in a television movie, Young Country. (Peter was the heavy.) It was a Western and, according to Davis, a lot of people thought it was the pilot for Alias Smith and Jones.

Ego Breakdown

"Peter was a snob about acting," Davis declared. "If he thought you were a good actor, he liked you. Otherwise, he would have no use for you."

About Duel's personal problems that led to his suicide, Davis said: "Peter was heading toward a breakdown of ego. He was a very heavy drinker, and it was tearing him apart emotionally to know he couldn't control it. That, to him, was crushing to his ego.

"The terrible irony is that he was such a consummate actor, yet he didn't like this series. And it did so much for him."

Davis is not entirely new to the show. In fact, he's been a part of it since the first episode. He's the voice of the narrator. Had he been under contract originally to Universal studios when he made Young Country with Duel, Davis may have been signed on for Alias Smith and Jones. Both Peter and Ben Murphy, who plays Jed Curry (Jones), were under Universal contracts at the time. Now Davis also has a contract.

Subtle Changes

There will be some subtle changes next season, according to Davis. "For one thing, Ben's going to have to wear lifts now," Davis said with a smile. Roger is about five inches taller than Ben, who stands 5 feet 11, and didn't have to look up at Peter, who was only an inch taller.

As for the other subtle switches, according to Davis, there will be an effort to be more authentic to the period, get out on locations, and also bring in younger people ("35 was old in the old West," according to Davis) for supporting roles and guest appearances. It's all part of selling a Western not as a Western, but as a story of human relationships.

"Do you know how tough it is to sell a Western today?" David inquired. "You've got to have gold bricks inside the pockets. Alias Smith and Jones is staying on because it isn't a cowboy show. I honestly think Bonanza and Gunsmoke starting today wouldn't make it. They stay in there because they have such long-time loyal fans.

"The value in playing a Western hero on Alias Smith and Jones is that there is no value to the role. The show really is about charm and style. These guys have human quality, very indentifiable with kids.

The morning after Duel shot himself, Davis was called at 10 o'clock and told to prepare to take over. Holder of a masters degree from UCLA, Davis's career had taken several courses up to this point, enough to make him concerned about being typed. He really began to get noticed after a segment on Medical Center called The Idol Maker.

"That did a lot for me," Davis recalled, "but then I discovered producers and directors were asking, 'Can he do a Western TV movie?' "

So he next made Young Country with Duel and Joan Hackett. Then, Davis said, producers and directors who were impressed started asking, "Can he do contemporary?" It gets into a vicious cycle.

When he got the call to replace Duel, Davis was putting the finishing touches to a screenplay he had written, Between Dallas and Fort Worth There's a Town Called Arlington. It has a comedy ring to the title, but its a tragic love story about a guy who falls in love with his brother's wife, and in the end is shot by his brother. It's set against the background of the Pentacostal Church and the Oral Roberts followers.

At the moment, Davis is not too sure when it will go into production. He plans to produce and star in it.

Dino Quits Riviera Hotel

Dean Martin obviously is easing into retirement, only he didn't expect it to be hastened by his friends at the Riviera Hotel. Dean delivered an ultimatum that he didn't want to do two shows a night here anymore. Dean thought that since he's a small-percentage owner of the hotel, and since the hotel has done fantastically well in recent years — coinciding with his becoming a partner — he'd get his way.

Not so. Riviera president Ed Torres agonized over the ultimatum from Dean for two weeks, then reached a decision. He couldn't go along with one show a night for Dean. Every other entertainer would make the same demands, and want to get the same money for one show as for two. The show rooms would go broke, and to permit Dean to get away with it would have been a dangerous precedent.

So Dean and the Riviera separated — completely. Torres told Dean, and advised him the stockholders would also buy him out. If he's not there to entertain and lure people into the hotel, who needs him as a part owner?

Recognition for Edith Unnerves Actress Jean

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

Archie Bunker has become the most praised and the most condemned character in television's history. He is denounced as a bigot, described as a symbol of hard hats, decried by citizens as Polish extraction and evoked as a handy code term for middle class narrowness. He is also praised for speaking his mind; even for giving voice to the unspoken thoughts of many.

Only one character remained outside the controversy. This was Edith Bunker, the wife. Just about everyone loves Edith and the feeling was best summarized in a letter written to writer-producer Norman Lear by Duane Bradley Sanborne of Henniker, N.H., Sanborn described Edith as:

"Food of God who meets everything with a simple and uncomplicated and unthinking act of love."

The description is perfect for the character of Edith, but it hardly fits actress Jean Stapleton, who plays the role. Off camera, in the comfort of her rented house in the Westwood section o Los Angeles, is a serene Jean Stapleton, a woman of high intelligence and a dedicated sense of professional skill. She waited a long time for a public acclaim and now that it has come she isn't certain it is what she wants.

She has been married for 15 years to producer-director William H. Putch, who runs the Totem Pole Playhouse in Fayetteville, Pa. They met in Washington while Jean was performing at the National Theatre and Putch was working at the Olney, Md., theatre. They have a daughter, Pam, 14, and a son, John, 11.

Jean Stapleton was an established character actress on Broadway and in motion pictures before she made three trips to New York to read the part of Edith Bunker for Norman Lear. He now claims that he never really considered anyone else for the part.

She was cast opposite Carroll O'Connor when a pilot episode of All in the Family was filmed in New York in January, 1969. Nothing happened. The roles of Mike and Gloria Stivic were given to Rob Reiher and Sally Struthers and a second pilot was made in Hollywood in March of 1969. Again, nothing happened.

ABC-TV dropped its option on the series and CBS-TV picked up the option and decided the show would be placed — definitely — in either January or September, 1971. That's when CBS-TV president Robert D. Wood learned just how stubborn a man is Norman Lear. Fights with network censors continued right up until the show went on the air, Jan. 25, 1971. Lear did give up a swear word and he did agree to cut one scene that wasn't needed, but he refused to yield further.

"Let's go ahead and get wet all over. You can't get any wetter than wet all over." Wood agreed.

Extra switchboard operators were hired, but they really weren't needed. And the upward climb of All in the Family began in the ratings.

Jean Stapleton began collecting awards. An Emmy the first season and a gold record for the All in the Family album the second season. She was in great demand, sought for honors, all over the country.

But she als decided, in typical fashion, to buy a home in Los Angeles and to return to the Totem Pole Playhouse for most of this summer. The theatre is in Caledonia State Park, "11 miles south of Gettysburg" and Jean will appear in three plays: Butterflies Are Free (May 27 through June 10), Everybody Loves Opal (June 12-24) and Come Back Little Sheba (June 26-July 8).

As for having been discovered and adored by the mass media audience, Jean wasn't so certain that she approved. With bright blue-green eyes shining, she explained that the "love and affection for the show and for Edith" is just wonderful. But she wasn't nearly so certain about Jean Stapleton's being turned into public property.

"I am," she said with a quiet determination, "a very private person. I cherish my privacy. And I'm not going to lose it."

Teachers Honor Archie Bunker

LOS GATOS, Calif. (UPI) — The Teamsters Union may have rejected Archie Bunker but the Teachers Union has not.

Leo F. O'Neill, president of American Federation of Teachers Local 1953, said he has a membership pin waiting for the rough-talking television character from the show All in the Family.

O'Neill sent a letter to Archie Bunker offering membership in the Teachers Union after the Teamsters Union blasted his portrayal of middle Americans as bigots and narrow-minded.

"If you have not heretofore considered yourself a teacher, please submit to our judgment," O'Neill wrote Bunker.

"We maintain that, in your weekly half-hour program, you have accomplished more in the education of the public about human relations than we in public education have accomplished in half a century.

"If you think that we are not your kind of people, perish the thought! Along with all Americans, the more we get to know you the more we know about ourselves.

"It is true that a few of our members have questioned your syntax. I only wish that we could communicate with your clarity and effectiveness."

James Garner will star in How to Become President of the United States for his own Cherokee productions . . . Jackie Vernon will be a regular on the new Goldiggers series . . . Michael York, young star of Cabaret, has signed for a top role in Lost Horizon . . .
